Lovingly dedicated to Ann, Betsy, Candace, Frances, Leslie, Pamela, and Patricia; also to Jeff and Steve; and to the parish family of All Saints-by-the-Sea Episcopal Church in Santa Barbara, California.

Creator God, you made the world—oceans and mountains, cliffs and clouds.

We see you in the lion's leap and in the painted sky at dawn.
We hear your voice in the song of whales and in the eagle's eerie cry.

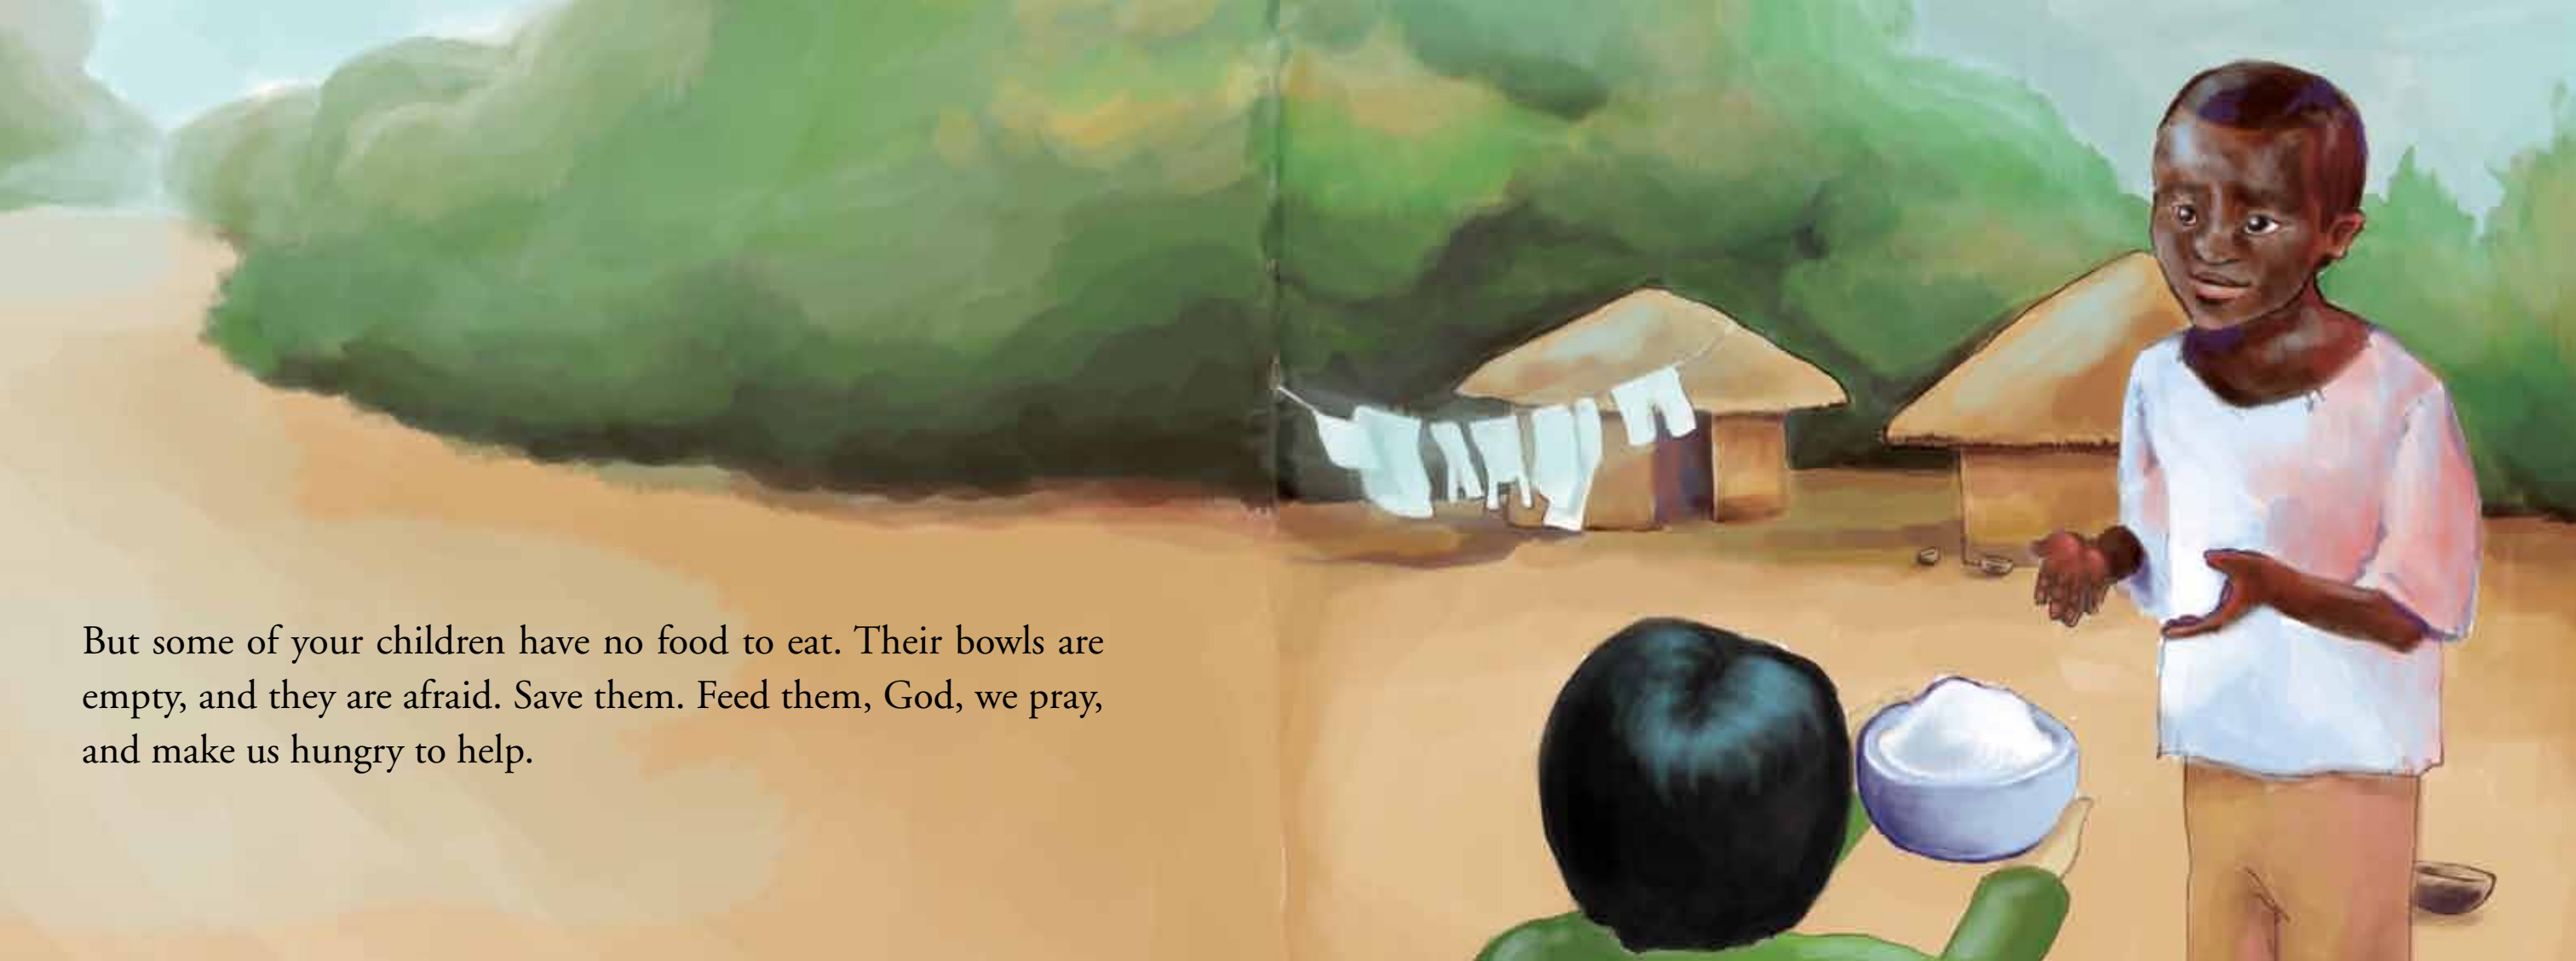

You created us to be your children—your own. We see your face when people smile. And when they dance, the music comes from you.

May all of your children climb your holy hill together. May we find at the top a tree house with a ladder leading up. May there be swings to lift us, drums to beat, and songs we all know how to sing.

But some of your children have no food to eat. Their bowls are empty, and they are afraid. Save them. Feed them, God, we pray, and make us hungry to help.

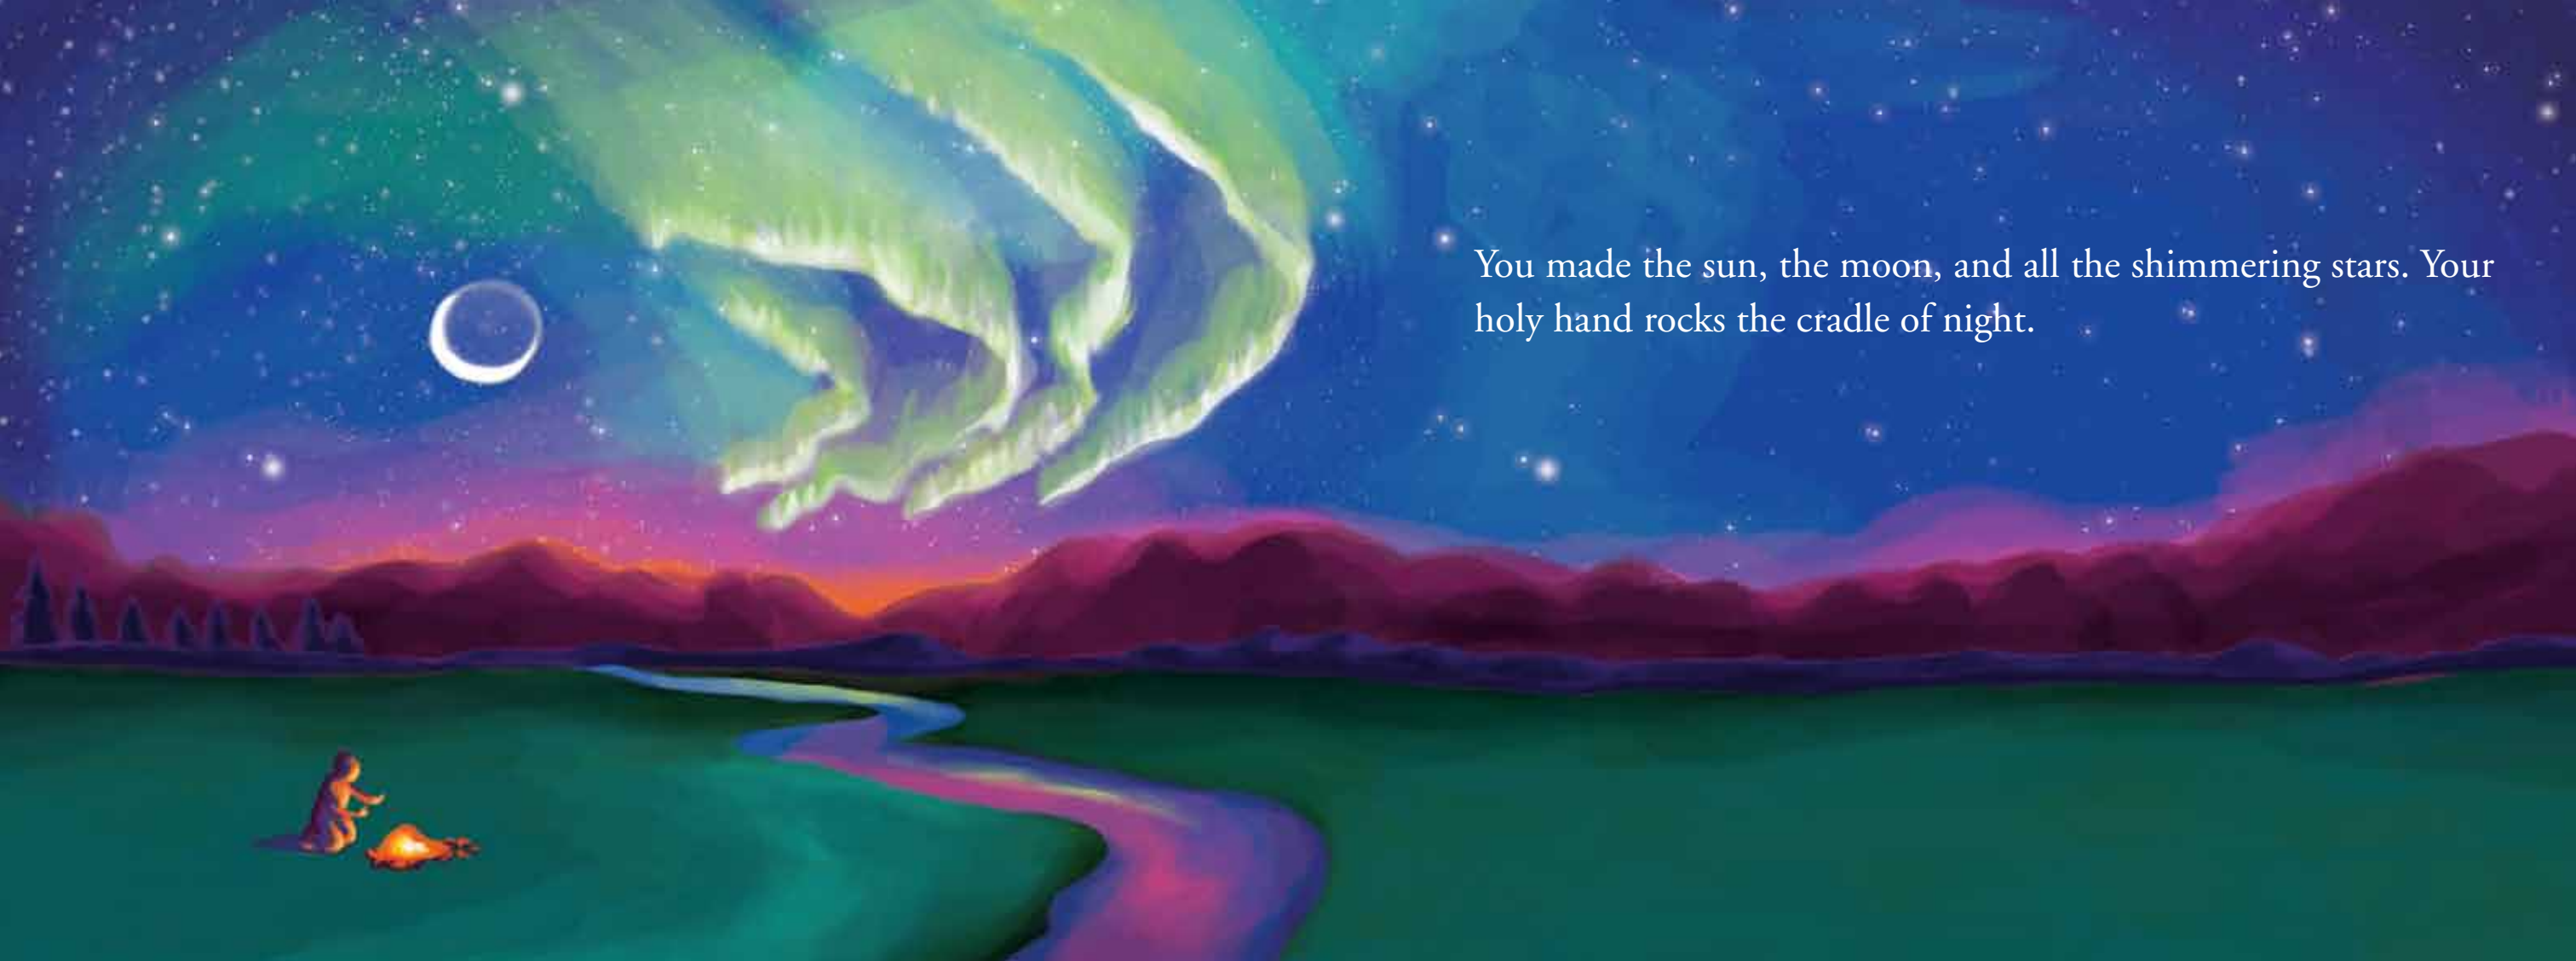

Forgive us, Lord, when we turn away from you. Teach us to forgive when others wrong us. Send a wind of blessing to blow our angry words away. Wash us clean in holy rain.

Let our feet run fast from wrong. Let us drink your goodness like water from a mountain stream.

Creator God, your eyes can see all that has happened, all that is now, and all that ever will be. You command the world. Thunder and lightning obey your voice.

You made the sun, the moon, and all the shimmering stars. Your holy hand rocks the cradle of night.

For you are God, blessed and holy. Shine your light upon our path.
Be the breath we breathe. Be the beating of our hearts. Amen.
