This series is dedicated to the publication of innovative and multidisciplinary approaches to epistemic horizons in Czech culture, both those events that are widely acknowledged as watershed moments in the region’s history—such as the Prague Spring—and crucial limning points in Czech history—such as the accomplishments of Czech cinema in the 1950s—that are as yet under-represented in scholarship. It welcomes proposals for monographs and multi-authored edited volumes in history, literary studies, film and media, critical theory, cultural studies, musicology, and the arts, as well as transdisciplinary and comparative analyses that take these models as both framework and imperative.
