Edward Holt is an Assistant Professor of History at Grambling State University and a 2019-2020 fellow with the Madrid Institute for Advanced Study. He completed his doctoral work at Saint Louis University. His articles have received the Best Early Career Article Prize from the Association for Spanish and Portuguese Historical Studies, as well as the Bernard Hamilton Essay Prize from the Society for the Study of the Crusades and the Latin East. He is currently working on a history of leadership in medieval Iberia, tentatively titled Rituals of Leadership: Power and Memory in Thirteenth-Century Iberia, which explores how the royal court and ecclesiastical hierarchies of Castile-León articulated conceptions of rulership as well as how various subject groups mediated these claims of legitimacy.
