British London based artist Rosie Emerson combines photography, art and graphics to produce enigmatic portraits of women in beautiful stature. Drawing references from old and new resources, Emerson takes on the desire of women through beauty and grace. Her work explores the notion of women as a subject and form whilst simultaneously exploring beauty, power and voyeurism.

As an artist she has exhibited across the UK in addition to Europe and the US. She has also illustrated for brands such as Sony, Triumph Underwear and Redbull whilst her sense of style and fashion within her imagery has led for her work to be published in many publications including Vogue, Harpers Bazaar and The Financial Times, "How To Spend It" Magazine.
