Another well-made white, the 2014 Sauvignon Blanc is riper and more textured than the 2013, with less grassy greenness and more forward fruit characteristics. Giving up pretty notes of white peach, white flowers and honeysuckle, with a touch of pine sap, it hits the palate with a medium-bodied, juicy, rounded and deliciously pure character that keeps you coming back to the glass. Drink it over the coming year or two as well. Specializing in Sauvignon Blanc from the Happy Canyon region of Santa Barbara Canyon, Grimm's Bluff gets winemaking advice from Paul Lato. These are solid, distinctive wines.

The 2013 Sauvignon Blanc is exotic and intense, with lots of grassy herbs, white peach, hints of tropical fruit and subtle mineral characteristics giving way to a medium-bodied, juicy, lively and hard-to-resist vibe on the palate. While the focus here is bright and crisp, it has good texture and finishes clean and dry. It will be a killer seafood wine and should drink nicely for 1-2 years. A hypothetical mix of the 2013 and 2014 traditional releases, the 2014 Sauvignon Blanc Reserve has classy notes of green citrus, white peach, white flowers and a touch of honeysuckle to go with a medium-bodied, juicy, yet still concentrated, textured and seriously drinkable profile on the palate. I love its purity and texture, and it's impeccably balanced and finishes with excellent persistence and clarity. This is a terrific Sauvignon Blanc that will be versatile on the dinner table and drink nicely for 1-2 years.
