2003 Keynote Speaker Cesar Pelli

AIA Gold Medalist Cesar Pelli FAIA presented his lecture at the 2003 AIA London/UK Keynote Speaker to a capacity audience on the 20th November 2003. The venue was the Wintergarden at Canary Wharf, recently completed by Cesar Pelli and Associates Architects of New Haven, Connecticut.

The lecture began with an overview of the evolution and continuing development of Canary Wharf – photos p.3. His firm designed the master plan, the anchor high rise One Canada Square, and have subsequently designed many further office buildings, including the Citigroup Tower. Mr Pelli complimented the Canary Wharf Corporation as being an excellent and enlightened client in developing a project of this scale and on such a high level of quality. He noted that as more businesses are occupying the Wharf there is more need for the public spaces, the public transport system, development of retail and cultural venues, new principal sectors of Great Wharf has increasingly place to be in the Europe then discussed current an practice that includes a performing and visual a include projects in Cali Washington, and Ohio; Malaysia and Spain among For those that are only far building work, those near types allowed Pelli to design, breadth and diversity

'CROSSING THE POND' 20 YEARS ON ... PART 3 OF 3

September 29, 2019

Original article by Elizabeth Harrison Kubany in 1999, Architectural Record – at the time, the official magazine of the AIA.

Uncertainty and Change

The 1986 Big Bang had a positive effect on the UK economy, and the American firms that followed it were comfortably settled by 1999. Since then, the British economy has cycled hot and cold. The most recent recession – the 2008 'Credit Crunch' – was a sharp jolt to complacency, taking its toll on all UK-based architects and dispersing many to the Middle East or Asia for survival. The large American firms were not immune, and some are reported at the time to have dropped staff by as much as 80%.

Having endured the Credit Crunch, today's architects are now faced with an anxious global disquiet – economic uncertainty, unsettled political conditions and trade deterioration. In the UK, general disquiet is overshadowed by the prospect of the UK leaving the European Union – or 'Brexit'.
