Welcome to Williamsburg, hipster haven and asylum for artists. It's a natural place for a coup, or, rather, a "COO". A cultural uprising, the three-day show features college-age, homegrown NYC artists expressing their perspective on the city through a variety of diverse creative mediums. Sure, they're probably all privileged kids whose art is enabled by disapproving yet generous parents, but we don't hold a grudge. NYC, dynamic dame that she is, on display in all her underground glory; how can you resist?
