ORANGE ON THE PAGE Christo and Jeanne-Claude sign copies of their book "On the Way to the Gates" (Taschen). "The Gates" are on view through Sunday. Friday, 4:45-8 p.m., Guggenheim Museum, 1071 Fifth Ave. at 89th Street, 212-423-3500, free.

DEEP FREEZE Tony Stanzione's site-specific sculpture "Cold Storage" consists of stacked steel bunk beds, bedpans, and pillows made of ice. Over the course of the exhibit, water that corresponds to the temperature outside will freeze as it runs over the 15-foot-tall structure. Through Monday, March 14, Friday-Monday, noon-6 p.m., Black & White Gallery, 483 Driggs Ave., between N. 9th and N. 10th streets, Williamsburg, Brooklyn, 718-599-8775, free.

TIMES SQUARE MEMORIES Kodak estimates that nearly 100 million pictures are taken of Times Square each year. The exhibit "At the Crossroads of Desire" celebrates Times Square's centennial with a selection of photographs from throughout its history. Photographs by Rudy Burckhardt, Weegee, Robert Frank, and William Klein are included. The show is organized chronologically within six themes: building and planning, "signs of the times," the crowd, entertainment, fantasy and desire, and "making news." Through Saturday, March 26, Monday-Friday, 11 a.m.-6 p.m., Saturday, noon-5 p.m., AXA Gallery, Equitable Tower atrium lobby, 787 Seventh Ave. at 51st Street, 212-554-4818, free.

FANTASY WORLDS UBU Gallery displays drawings made by troubled German artist Unica Zurn during the decade before her 1970 suicide in Paris. Born in Berlin, Zurn was fascinated by fantastical creatures and repeating patterns. She was encouraged by her lover, Surrealist artist Hans Bellmer, to experiment with "automatic" drawings that incorporated repetitive shapes and lines. Zurn was also an accomplished writer who is known for poems in which each line is an anagram of the last. Bellmer was best known for a scandalous series of photographs of dolls in sexual poses. Through Saturday, April 16, Tuesday-Saturday, 11 a.m.-6 p.m., UBU Gallery, 416 E. 59th St., between York and First avenues, 212-753-4444, free.
