When asked about career path, some are quick to say things like “CEO in 10 years” or “National expert in…..” However, reality asks, “Where’s our profession headed? What about our roles as professionals?” The expectations of philanthropy performance have dramatically changed in recent years. With strategic institutional alignment, comprehensive programs and higher expectations, philanthropy professionals are tasked with much more than just making the ask. With such heavy expectations for you, when will you find the time to identify your personal steps to career success?
