FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Festival on schedule for February 11-14, 2016

2015.12.02 – With the Cinema Verde International Film & Arts Festival 2016 film submission deadline just past, Festival Director Trish Riley is excited about films in the queue for consideration.

“Looking over what has already been submitted, we have already covered many of our key areas, from the quality of food, air, and water to growing a green economy – all critical to the wellness of our planet. The films show us what we can do as concerned lovers of our planet—a planet that has given us so much and now needs us to give back to preserve what we have.” Trish said.

Trish is also excited that this year the venue for the Festival returns to the Hippodrome Theater in downtown, where the very first Cinema Verde was held in 2010.

With 3 months of preparations still in the works for February 2016’s Festival, the Cinema Verde team’s focus is directed toward lining up star quality, environmentally conscientious partners to work with the Cinema Verde to alert us to what is at stake if we don’t recognizes how our actions affect the environment, which is the source of our quality of life.

“The Mission of Cinema Verde has always been to increase public awareness about environmental practices that enhance public health and that improve the quality of life for all,” Cinema Verde Director Trish Riley said. “We are excited about many of this festival’s participants who are waiting to partner with us.”

This year’s festival will include many of the same popular components as last year’s festival: live discussions, talk back, live music festival, and an environmental fair.

Information about previous Cinema Festivals at http://www.cinemaverde.org/: