Girl Rising’s mission is to change the way the world values girls and their potential. Driven by decades of research demonstrating that girls' access to education and opportunity is the single most effective factor in transforming pressing global issues as varied as health, poverty, gender equality, and climate change, GR creates original media and creative campaigns about the universal benefits of educating girls. Working with local partners, GR reaches youth and their communities through proven GR curricula, customized for each geography, building skills and addressing powerful social norms that hold girls back. GR proudly collaborates with many organizations, companies, influencers, teachers, students and grass-roots activists under the banner of girl’s equality.

The three pillars of our work are:

- Stories: GR tells stories about girls who face daunting barriers to their independence and stand up to them with determination and courage. These stories are deeply intimate, but represent the reality of girls around the world.

- Programs: Using these stories as the cornerstone of our educational tools, we work with local partners to build confidence and agency in girls and to change attitudes and social norms so that entire communities stand up for girls and against gender discrimination.

- Movement Building: GR content ignites and fuels social movements. GR uses stories to inform, engage and inspire the public to take action for girls and gender equality.

Girl Rising is currently working in India, Pakistan, Guatemala, Kenya, Indonesia, Thailand, Philippines, Vietnam, Argentina and the US. Girl Rising’s stories and tools are reaching millions of people around the world, inspiring thousands to take action and lead change in their own communities. And we’ve only just begun!

For more information on Girl Rising, please visit www.girlrising.org.

POSITION SUMMARY

Reporting to the VP of Programs, the Global Program Manager serves as a key member of the Program team, working collaboratively with program staff to implement GR programs with partnering organizations around the world -- building agency in girls and shifting the social norms and cultural barriers that hold them back.
RESPONSIBILITIES

- Manage the planning, development, implementation, and M&E for assigned GR projects and programs; provide support and collaborate on other projects and programs led by other Program Team members.
- Oversee GR's curricula, tools, training and media assets used across countries, the development of new curricula and the adaptation of existing materials for use in new regions of the world.
- Maintain GR systems and data/database and advise on established programmatic monitoring, evaluation and learning strategies, frameworks, plans and indicators to capture project performance and results.
- Serve as relationship manager for program-related strategic corporate and NGO partners.
- Oversee the creation of media content such as local vignettes for GR curricula; manage GR's media library and oversee adaptations/dubbing/editing/sourcing.
- Remain current on research, learnings and evidence that will inform GR’s work and impact; share key learnings from GR programs across the education and gender networks.
- Represent Girl Rising at external events; cultivate and strengthen network of NGOs, government institutions and funders.

QUALIFICATIONS

- A minimum of 3 to 5 years experience working in the adolescent education and/or gender arena at an international NGO.
- Experience working in program planning and implementation, and monitoring and evaluation in gender equity and/or education. Direct experience with curricula and educational tools and/or in gender programs a plus.
- Experience in media content development/video production preferred.
- Strong communication skills, both verbal and written, as well as a high attention to detail.
- A collaborative nature and ability to work as a team based environment.
- Experience working internationally a plus.
- Bachelor's degree in a related field required, Masters Degree preferred.
- Ability to articulate passion for Girl Rising’s mission.

This is a US based position, with preference for the Washington, DC (working remotely) or New York City. Some travel required.

APPLY

To apply for this position, please send resume and cover letter to jobs@girlrising.org. Include “Program Manager Applicant” in the Subject line of the email.