

Broken Things

Your soft words ring like padded screams across the autumn air

Wherever girls have broken dreams, my love will find them there

For love, they say, will seek its own and I'm the one to blame

But broken things don't mind the pain or tend to love the same