Le Paris de Proust

The garden to which Marcel rushes to meet Gilberte and her friends borders the northern side of the Champs-Élysées. If you enter it just across the street from the American Embassy (at the northwest corner of the Place de la Concorde), you will see a marker indicating its current name: La Promenade Marcel Proust. So far as topography and general appearance are concerned little has changed since Proust’s day.