“The God Who Remembers”

Exodus 2:23-25

1. What is it about oppression or slavery (like in Egypt) that we bristle against?

We want to be in control and have “freedom” over how we live and what we do.

2. What does it mean for you to be heard by God, seen and known?

To be valued by the Creator of the universe, and have him engaged in my life. This makes a lot of things worth it.

3. How does our quest to be “strong” as defined by culture change in Jesus?

We are free to embrace our weakness knowing we are secure in Christ and we can pursue success from our place in him rather than to earn respect or something else.

4. Where are the captives in our city? Who is in need of freedom and how can we be used to help free them?

Homeless, even the affluent trapped to financial situations, work schedules and expectations of others. By preaching the gospel, by sharing what is truly valuable with them.
