Michelle specialises in civil litigation with an emphasis on Media & Entertainment law and Intellectual Property.

Example of advice: All aspects of general commercial law, Copyright, Internet, Company Law (including Shareholder Agreements, Shareholders Disputes, Company Incorporation and Director's Service Contracts), Music Agreements (including Artist Management Agreements, Publishing Agreements and Artist Disputes), Film Production Agreements and Film Finance Agreements, Internet Domain Names and Trade Marks (acquisition and protection), Product Licensing and Distribution Agreements, Franchising Agreements, Libel and Slander and Private Client Landlord and Tenant Disputes.

Michelle's clients include fashion models, fashion PR houses, session make up artists, celebrity hairdressers, television artists, film production companies, internet retailers, nightclub and restaurant owners, advertising companies, on-line travel services companies, music artist managers, as well as other general commercial companies.

Michelle holds a postgraduate Diploma in Law and the Legal Practice Certificate from BPP Law School, London. She has a BA Hons in Italian from University College London and has also studied History of Film and Cinema and English History at the University of Bologna in Italy.

Michelle was a consultant for an Italian law firm when training with New Media Law (she qualified in July 2003). She has lectured at the University of Westminster Legal Practice Course and contributed to the Oxbridge Guide to Law and European Corporate Lawyer Magazine. Immediately before qualifying, Michelle was Chief Legal officer at a London-based television company, oversaw the running of the commercial bookings department at IMG Models, London and spent time in the commercial department of an international corporate firm in Hong Kong.

An avid traveller, Michelle is often to be found in the Middle East and India where she advises some of our ex-patriot clients and speaks French, Spanish and Italian.
