EIGHT SIGNS OF TERRORISM

1. Surveillance:

Someone trying to monitor or record activities. If terrorists are targeting a specific area, they will most likely be observed in that area during the planning phase of the operation. Terrorists will attempt to determine the strengths, weaknesses, and number of personnel that may respond to an incident. Routes to and from the target can be established.

2. Elicitation/Seeking Information:

An attempt to gain information through inquiries. This includes anyone attempting to gain information about a place, person or operation. Elicitation attempts can be made by mail, fax, telephone, or in person. Examples would be inquiries about critical infrastructure.

3. Tests of Security:

These are usually conducted by driving past or even penetrating the target, moving into sensitive areas, and observing security or law enforcement response. Specific areas of interest to terrorists would include how long it takes security or law enforcement to respond.

4. Acquiring Supplies:

This could be purchasing or stealing explosives, weapons or ammunition. It could be the unusual purchasing or storing of fertilizer or harmful chemicals. Terrorists would also find it useful to acquire law enforcement equipment and identification, military uniforms and decals, as well as flight passes, badges or even flight manuals.

5. Suspicious People Who Do Not Belong:

This includes suspicious border crossings, stowaways or people jumping ship. It could be someone in a workplace, building, neighborhood, or business who does not fit in because of their demeanor, unusual questions, or statements they make.

6. Dry Run/Trial Run:

Before the execution of the plan, terrorists may use a practice session to work out the flaws and unanticipated problems. This is especially true when planning a kidnapping but it can also pertain to bombings.

7. Deploying Assets/Getting Into Position:

This is your last chance to alert authorities before the terrorist act occurs. Remember that pre-incident indicators may come months or even years apart. Document every fragment of information and forward to the New Jersey Office of Homeland Security & Preparedness.

8. Terrorism Funding:

Terrorists use a variety of methods to raise, launder, and transport funds, including charities, credit card fraud, narcotics, human smuggling, counterfeit goods, smuggling cigarettes with missing or counterfeit tax stamps, and bulk cash smuggling. Indicators include suspicious credit card applications, spending, or multiple surnames at the same address.
