Dear Friends, Supporters, Partners and Colleagues,

Three concepts thread through our work as we look back and look forward-- kwasans, Tèt Ansanm, patenarya-- growth, together, partnership-- weave through everything we do at EqualHealth.

With each passing year, the pages of our annual report share more and more stories of Haitian-led educational and advocacy initiatives, as our trainees and colleagues go on to touch many other lives, both in Haiti and around the globe. The impact they have had has been inspiring and humbling, and we are constantly reminded of how fortunate we are to work with so many remarkable people.

In the pages that follow, you will see growth of Haiti’s healthcare community and the global social medicine movement. In settings that range from Port-au-Prince to Chicago, our programs represent work truly done together, in committed partnership with our Haitian and non-Haitian colleagues.

We, and our partners, are deeply grateful for your support.

Michelle Morse, MD MPH
Zadok Sacks, MD
Founding Co-Directors, EqualHealth

The mission of EqualHealth is to inspire, empower, and support the development of leaders among the next generation of Haitian health professionals.

We envision a healthy Haitian population that has the knowledge and ability to reduce the incidence of disease and access to an effective health care system run by qualified medical professionals who provide world-class, evidence-based care.
Kwasans
Growth
We come together to gain a greater understanding of social medicine, how to integrate it into our professions, and how to better understand and serve our patients. We will educate our peers to recognize inequities in healthcare and how to respectfully approach each of our patients and their life circumstances. On a more global level, we will use our deeper understanding of social and economic determinants of health to improve lives wherever we are.

We bring our experience and knowledge to unfamiliar halls and buildings steeped in history. We find common ground and shared knowledge with our peers and mentors in Boston. We absorb a wide range of exciting opportunities offered by the Boston medical and academic communities, whether we are surrounded by fellow educators as participants in the Harvard Macy Program for Educators in the Health Professions; attending daily morning reports and teaching rounds; or learning from the case method teaching masters at Harvard Business School. All the while, we envision how the knowledge we gain will inform our work at home, strengthen our skills as educators, and change the lives of our patients and trainees.

Social Medicine Alumni of Haiti

We meet as classmates in EqualHealth's social medicine course and become friends, partners, colleagues, and leaders. We imagine organizing gatherings with other students of medicine, nursing, and social work, where we meet together to share ideas and build a strong community. We are inspired to become social medicine educators ourselves.

Those were our dreams. Now, each year, our dreams are being realized and growing bolder.

In 2017, we assisted in courses and conferences, supported visiting professors and designed a seminar that helped our peers understand how together we can bring health care equity to Haiti. We also organized a hackathon, where over 150 of us spent hours exchanging ideas and envisioning ways to reduce maternal mortality among young women in rural areas.

We presented our research and experience internationally and felt the power of sharing our knowledge.

We are the voices that will strengthen the future of healthcare in Haiti. We are SMAH.
Patenarya Partnership
We are the schools and hospitals that train and treat the people of Haiti. Our goals are as ambitious as EqualHealth’s, as we work together in true partnership. We seek mastery of technical skills and clinical expertise. We incorporate key themes of social medicine across clinical roles. We aspire to develop faculty leadership and greater teaching and research expertise at our institutions supported by EqualHealth. We strive to share our experience and voice with the global community of practitioners through participation in international conferences and research publications.

As a founding member of the Social Medicine Consortium (SMC), we at EqualHealth have built on our foundational work in Haiti by developing and implementing social medicine curricula around the world; developing and supporting models of social medicine in practice; and organizing people and communities around actions to advocate for their core interests. The SMC is rooted in the belief that inequity kills, and that together we can achieve health equity by constructing systems that demand justice, recognize our global interconnectedness, and enable the next generation of health professionals to effect change. In 2017, we and our colleagues at other sponsoring organizations brought together more than 500 health care professionals in Chicago, a city plagued with inequities in health outcomes that are mirrored throughout the US and globally, where we committed ourselves to an ongoing mission: to create coalitions that redistribute power, center marginalized voices, and truly create equal health.
