

Contract Signing

Since they first started dating, whenever Michael and Christina wanted to claim a privilege over each other a privilege to tickle, a privilege to make Christina eat her vegetables, a privilege to make Mike obey they would take that privilege and let the other know that it is "in the contract". It is what they believe the other agreed to as a cost of entry into each other's lives, into their relationship, and into their engagement.

Today, they would like to extend that to their wedding. This being the most binding contract you can enter into, the two of them now want to formalize the agreement.

(Turn over and reveal empty contracts to be signed)

These contracts, though empty now, will be spoken in front of all of their loved ones and filled in later with their wedding vows. So hold them to their words until the ink is dry.