I did not realize what depth this program would have. I thought it would just be a cooking class and that’s it. The participants have formed a real community and I can see some real changes in the health of the patients and what they’re eating.

LETTER FROM EXECUTIVES

Dear friends of Wholesome Wave Georgia,

If 2015 was a year of growth for Wholesome Wave Georgia, 2016 was a year to dig deep. It was a year to further root our programs in the communities we serve and work closely with our partners to ensure our programs are accessible to everyone.

In the pages that follow, you will read stories of the families and farmers across the state that benefited from your support. Projects like the Fresh Food Bus and Senior Farmers Market Nutrition Program extended our programs’ support to some of the hardest to reach families. The Fruit & Vegetable Prescription Program established itself as a leading model for food as medicine and took root at leading healthcare institutions like Grady Memorial Hospital. We are excited to share the success of our programs with you, the partners and supporters that made it possible.

Thank you for helping us serve more Georgians in 2016 than ever before, and bringing us one step closer to realizing our vision of fresh, healthy, Georgia grown food for all.

Sincerely,

Sara Berney
Executive Director

Ed Seiber

In 2016, WWG decided our Double Value Coupon Program (DVCP) needed a makeover. Our staff worked closely with the Georgia Center for Nonprofits (GCN) to meet with DVCP participants and hear what they had to say about the program. What did they call the program? How did they describe it? Had they even heard of Wholesome Wave Georgia? GCN hosted five focus groups across the state and came back to WWG with some very valuable feedback. Common themes that emerged from the focus groups included the desires to save, get more food for less, and purchase fresh food.

Enter, Georgia Fresh For Less. WWG believes Georgia Fresh For Less (GF4L) represents the core message of the program and is simple to understand. Through GF4L, we match federal nutrition assistance (FNA, i.e. SNAP/food stamps, WIC) dollars—dollar for dollar—at participating farmers markets and farms across the state to make healthy, nourishing choices affordable for low-income families.

When FNA shoppers spend $10, they get $20 worth of fresh, local food. By matching each FNA dollar spent at farmers markets, we leverage existing government nutrition programs to promote healthy and affordable eating habits.

GF4L customers reported purchasing more fruits (67%) and vegetables (87%) and consuming more fruits (64%) and vegetables (76%) as a result of the program. 100% of GF4L customers surveyed felt that by doubling FNA benefits, WWG made local, healthy food more affordable to them.

Your support in 2016 helped our network of GF4L partner markets and farms expand from 31 to 45, allowing us to reach families and farmers in new parts of the state like Albany, Jesup and West Georgia. GF4L partners matched over $221,000 FNA dollars, translating to $442,000 worth of fresh, local food for Georgia’s families and $442,000 in income for Georgia’s local farmers.

PILOT PROJECTS

WWG worked with select Georgia Fresh For Less partner markets to launch four pilot projects that increase access to the program by reducing barriers to participation in Georgia Fresh For Less.

The Summer Meal Project created Summer Meal Feeding sites at farmers markets to encourage families with children to visit and shop at the market. This project aimed to attract new low-income customers to the market and increase the likelihood of their participation in Georgia Fresh For Less. Over the course of two months, the project served 274 meals to low-income children in Macon and Augusta.

We expanded the Fresh Food Bus Project to increase access to farmers markets by providing free transportation to the market. The project targeted low-income neighborhoods and communities where access to reliable transportation is a major barrier to market attendance. Across five sites, the Fresh Food Bus provided transportation to over 530 riders. Rider surveys show that 82% reported eating more produce because of the Fresh Food Bus.

In partnership with the Atlanta Regional Commission, WWG worked with local farmers who accept Senior Farmers Market Nutrition Program (FMNP) vouchers to match each voucher, dollar for dollar. This connected low-income seniors with their community farmers market and encouraged repeat visits to double their FNA dollars, stretching the impact the Senior FMNP voucher has on senior hunger. Seniors redeemed over $15,000 Senior FMNP vouchers at their local market.

We developed a Market Manager Scholarship to provide much-needed stipends for volunteer market managers at our partner markets. We found that partner markets with paid staff have the capacity to conduct more outreach and match more FNA dollars than markets without paid staff. As a result of the project, 69% of scholarship recipients were able to conduct more outreach and 75% increased the number of new customers using Georgia Fresh For Less at their market.
After a successful pilot program in 2015, WWG continued the Fruit and Vegetable Prescription® (FVRx®) Program in Augusta and expanded it to Atlanta at Grady Memorial Hospital and Good Samaritan Health Center. The FVRx Program promotes affordable access to fruits and vegetables and healthy eating in underserved communities through partnerships with healthcare providers, community organizations and fresh produce retailers. Wholesome Wave Georgia partners with healthcare providers to provide prescriptions for fruits and vegetables to patients with chronic, diet-related illnesses. The program also incorporates nutrition and culinary education to reinforce healthy eating habits.

By enrolling 120 program participants in 2016, WWG was able to positively affect their entire household, a total of 387 individuals who improved their healthy eating habits. Of those households, 78.3% were considered food-insecure with a household income of less than $25,000 per year. Participants redeemed a collective $26,290 worth of fruits and vegetable prescriptions to aid them in making lifestyle changes related to food and nutrition. Participants also reported a 12% increase in their knowledge of where to buy and a 32% increase in how to prepare fruits and vegetables for their families. The average BMI among FVRx Program participants decreased slightly over the course of the program from 35.9 kg/m² at baseline to 35.5 kg/m² at follow-up.

In November, WWG hosted its first annual FVRx Program Training for current and potential FVRx Program partners. Over 30 healthcare providers, nutritionists, and farmers market staff came together to learn about program requirements and guidelines, ask questions, and share knowledge and best practices. After the training, partners were able to start designing an FVRx Program for their community and apply for FVRx Program partnership for 2017.
Picnic In The Park
On Sunday, May 22, Wholesome Wave Georgia hosted its inaugural Picnic In The Park, sponsored by the Arby’s Foundation. Over 200 guests joined us in Atlanta’s Historic Fourth Ward Park to dig into picnic baskets curated by some of Atlanta’s favorite chefs, including Drew Belline, Terry Koval, and Todd Ginsberg.

“The vision behind our inaugural Picnic in the Park is to bring together a diverse group of community members to celebrate the work happening across our state to create access to healthy, local food for all,” says Executive Director Sara Berney. “We’re excited to bring together farmers, program participants, farmers markets, medical professionals, and community organizations, offering a unique opportunity for everyone to connect and develop new friendships.”

Southern Chefs Potluck
On Sunday, September 11, Wholesome Wave Georgia hosted its 7th annual Southern Chefs Potluck fundraiser at Inn at Serenbe. This year’s event brought together over 250 guests, chefs, and bartenders from across Georgia for an afternoon of food, fellowship, and fundraising. The event raised over $185,000, for a total impact of $370,000 worth of fresh food to low-income families in Georgia and $370,000 in income for Georgia’s local farmers.

Co-Chaired by Dominique Love and Mike Greto, we introduced exciting new elements to the Potluck this year, including a VIP after-party for chefs and VIP guests. Hosted at one of the Serenbe’s first Farmettes, guests ended their evening with live music, cocktails, and small bites from Michael Gulotta, Eli Kirshtein, and Jorge Ortiz.

We are so grateful to the Southern Chefs Potluck Committee for making our 7th annual event the most successful Potluck yet!

Georgia Fresh for Less Participant
It’s two o’clock on a Friday Afternoon In Jesup, Georgia and it seems like everybody in town is at the Wayne County Farmers Market. The constant flow of shoppers and the lively conversations between customers and vendors makes one thing clear: everybody knows everybody at the farmers market.

“We’re one big happy family!” says Debbie Pye, the Wayne County Farmers Market Manager.

Jesup is a small, friendly town in Wayne County, roughly 65 miles southwest of Savannah. With a population of 30,000, over 20% of Wayne County residents live at or below the poverty level, and 25% receive Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP/Food Stamps) benefits. Debbie recognized the need in her community for Georgia Fresh for Less and was excited about the impact it would have on local families and farmers. In 2016, the Wayne County Farmers Market joined Wholesome Wave Georgia’s network of Georgia Fresh For Less partners and matched over $5,900 in SNAP benefits.

Debbie’s passion for local agriculture is rooted in her upbringing. She grew up on her grandfather’s farm where he raised chickens and cattle and rotated his annual crops. Her parents opened a plant nursery (now run by her brother) and raised chickens. Debbie herself is a backyard gardener and grows produce for her canning business, The Uncanny Cannery.

She was selling her jams and jellies at a small market at the local hospital when she heard rumors that Wayne County might be getting their own farmers market. “I was determined to be on the Board,” she says. She quickly joined the market’s Advisory Board, and then the Executive Board. When the time came to hire a Market Manager, Debbie knew she was qualified, so she applied and was hired shortly after. As the first Market Manager for the market, she has one mission: provide good, quality food for everybody.

On a typical Friday, you can find Debbie at the old state farmers market pavilion at 8:00 AM, getting ready for the market that opens at noon. Music plays through the speakers and several folks arrive early, eager to have the first pick of fresh fruits and vegetables. The Market has a wide geographic reach—some customers drive over 30 miles from Liberty County, while others hop on the Fresh Food Bus that picks up residents from the Jesup Housing Authority a few miles down the road.

The Market received funding from Wholesome Wave Georgia to start a Fresh Food Bus project, which aims to increase access to farmers markets by providing free transportation to the market. It targets low-income neighborhoods and communities where access to reliable transportation is a major barrier to market attendance. Debbie partnered with the Wayne County Public Transit Office to design a route and provide a vehicle and driver. George, the Fresh Food Bus driver, is deeply invested in the project. After receiving his route assignment, George took all of Debbie’s fliers and went door to door promoting the Bus and the Georgia Fresh For Less program. Each week, George drives 15 to 20 customers to and from the market.

Debbie says first-time Georgia Fresh For Less customers are skeptical, “Nobody believes you. They think it’s a gimmick.” With each new customer, Debbie uses her own credit card to demonstrate how the program works. Once customers become comfortable with the program, Debbie encourages customers to spread the word. One particular shopper could not wait to tell her friend. She whipped out her cell phone to call a friend and exclaimed: “You won’t believe what they got goin’ on down here at the market!”

Word about the market continues to spread and bring in new customers. In 2016, over 150 new SNAP customers came to the Market. New customers provided more income for farmers and attracted new vendors to the market, some from as far as Tybee Island. The $5,900 SNAP dollars that were matched through Georgia Fresh for Less translates to nearly $12,000 in revenue for local farmers and investment into Jesup’s local economy.
The success of the Georgia Fresh For Less program at the market does not come without challenges. While promoting the program, Debbie often receives pushback from local businesses. “There’s a stigma there.” Across the country, there is a widespread misconception that SNAP recipients are lazy and entitled or that SNAP is rife with fraud and abuse. However, recent data from USDA shows that over 77% of SNAP households have at least one working family member. According to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities (CBPP), SNAP fraud has been cut by 75% over the last 15 years, and the program’s error rate is at an all-time low of less than 3 percent. The same report from CBPP shows that the average SNAP benefit per person per meal in Georgia is only $1.42. Debbie tries to educate others in her community, “but I’ve had a lot of doors shut in my face.”

Stigma and rejection may hinder the promotion of the Georgia Fresh For Less program, but it does not make it any less meaningful to those who use it. A young single mother is relieved that she can now afford fresh, healthy food for her toddler son. A mother uses the program to teach her teenage daughter how to shop on a budget. A grandmother, with tears streaming down her face, is thrilled that her monthly benefits of $65 will help her purchase $130 worth of fresh, local food: “God is so good!”

The Wayne County Farmers Market plays a big part in the local community. In 2017, Debbie hopes to start a Power of Produce (POP) Club to engage more children, host more cooking demonstrations, and double the amount of SNAP benefits matched at the Market in 2016. Through Georgia Fresh For Less, those SNAP benefits will put more fresh, local food on the tables of low-income families, and will increase revenue for local farmers. As Debbie likes to say, “It puts it back into our own dirt.”
