Press Release – TEPPFA

Brussels, 17-09-2014

Do we really need PEF?

Prof. Matthias Finkbeiner (Technical University Berlin) and Michele Galatola (European Commission) will debate and try to answer to this question at the next PEF World Forum. Among the other pilot representatives, Claudia Topalli (Environmental & Regulatory Affairs Manager) will present a status of play of the PEF pilot hot& cold water supply pipes within the building, project led by TEPPFA.

PEF World Summit will be a two-day event of workshops, debates, and networking opportunities, representing the perfect setting to explore new communication opportunities, share your interests, increase your network, and build new alliances!

On 1 October 2014 there will be collective sessions focusing on the EU Environmental Footprint initiative, leading business perspectives and new ways of consumer communication.

The PEF World Forum summit is a joint platform for companies and their stakeholders that will provide plenty of networking opportunities, such as joint lunch break and networking dinner as well as open space and other interaction techniques.

In its events the Forum brought together over 1000 stakeholders from more than 40 countries!
