

WHEN YOUR CLIENT QUILTS

When your client quits, there's work for you to do – but first, we need to look at who you're being about it.

In breakthrough coaching, your client quitting is one of the most important moments. The way you handle it will largely dictate whether or not they create a breakthrough.

Standing for people is messy business, which is why many coaches don't do it. Thank you for standing for your clients when no one else will (including themselves). Be sure to take care of yourself through this process.