

Craig H. Nielsen Foundation Announces Funding Opportunity for Psychosocial Research

02/28/2017 - The Craig H. Nielsen Foundation is pleased to announce the launch of this year's Psychosocial Research grants cycle. Eligible organizations conducting research that explores the interrelation of behavioral, social and psychological factors that influence participation, health practice, lifestyle, and support systems in community and clinical settings are encouraged to apply.

Award amounts in this competitive grants process range from $150,000 to $400,000. Funding categories range from postdoctoral fellowships to pilot grants and demonstration projects. PSR grant support includes, but is not limited to, research on aging, caregiving (formal and informal networks), employment/work, health behaviors and fitness, independent living/lifestyle, self-management/self-care, and technology access.

To learn more about the different funding categories, eligibility criteria and deadlines, visit chnfoundation.org/how-to-apply/ to review the Psychosocial Research Grant Application Guide. Interested applicants must submit a required Letter of Intent by March 31, 2017 via proposalCENTRAL.
