Alice Munro, At Home And Abroad: How The Nobel Prize In Literature Affects Book Sales

12.2013 PREPARED BY BOOKNET CANADA STAFF

ALICE MUNRO, AT HOME AND ABROAD: HOW THE NOBEL PRIZE IN LITERATURE AFFECTS BOOK SALES

With publications dating back to 1968, Alice Munro has long been a Canadian literary sweetheart. Throughout her career she has been no stranger to literary awards; she's taken home the Governor General's Literary Award (1968, 1978, 1986), the Booker (1980), the Man Booker (2009), and the Giller Prize (1998, 2004), among many others.

On October 10, 2013, Canadians were elated to hear that Alice Munro had won the Nobel Prize in Literature. Since the annual award was founded in 1901, it has been awarded to 110 Nobel Laureates, but Munro is the first Canadian—and the 13th woman—ever to win.

In order to help publishers ensure they have enough books to meet demand if one of their titles wins an award, BookNet Canada compiles annual literary award studies examining the sales trends in Canada for shortlisted and winning titles. So as soon as the Munro win was announced, the wheels at BookNet started turning. What happens when a Canadian author receives the Nobel Prize in Literature? How much will the sales of their books increase in Canada? And will their sales also increase internationally?

To answer these questions, BookNet Canada has joined forces with Nielsen Book to analyze Canadian and international sales data for Alice Munro's titles. Nielsen has kindly provided sales information from Australia, India, Italy, New Zealand, Ireland, the United States, South Africa, Spain and the United Kingdom while BookNet Canada has provided detailed information for Canada. First, a few details on methodology...

- With ebook data reporting lags and the lack of access to both national and international ebook data, sales are limited to hardcover and paperback print format only.
- Data included is for the eight-week period from the week ending September 21 through to the week ending November 10, 2013, inclusive. We have made a comparison between the time period prior to the announcement of the Nobel Prize in Literature and the three weeks following. This approach allows us to set a benchmark for sales and follow the trending for the period following.
- Analysis is limited to titles that were available and selling two weeks prior to the award announcement.
- While both BNC SalesData (BookNet Canada) and BookScan (Nielsen) are very comprehensive reporting systems, sales numbers are limited to reporting stores only. The percentage of sales coverage will vary from country to country.

WHAT A WIN CAN DO FOR BOOK SALES

In order to analyze the effect of the Nobel Prize in Literature, we have totaled up weekly sales in each country for all Alice Munro hardcover and paperback titles and compared the weekly cumulative sales over an eight-week period. The results are considerable both in Canada and internationally. When comparing sales in the week ending September 21, 2013 to the week ending October 19 (the week after the win), we find that the percent increase was anywhere between 369% in Australia and a staggering 4424% in Canada.

	Australia	Canada	India	Ireland	Italy	New Zealand	South Africa	Spain	United Kingdom	United States
Change between Sept 21 and Oct 19	369%	4424%	1467%	2625%	4213%	442%	800%	1890%	1069%	722%
Change between Sept 21 and Oct 26	3264%	4269%	967%	2688%	4527%	42%	400%	3041%	2512%	979%

The increase in Canadian sales was immediate and substantial, with the largest number of Canadian units sold the week of the award win. During that week, sales increased from 94 units to a height of 6,345 units for all of Munro's titles, a 6650% increase.

One important consideration is the fact that Alice Munro's most recent book, Dear Life, was released in paperback in early October 2013 — just weeks, if not days, before she was awarded the Nobel Prize on October 10. In the United States and in Canada, Dear Life was released on October 8, just two days prior to the announcement. While this likely played a part in exacerbating the increase, it also means that there was likely more stock on hand in bookstores, which only serves to fulfill greater demand.

While Canada saw the largest percent increase for most weeks it is, perhaps unsurprisingly, the United States that saw the biggest spike in units sold, increasing from slightly less than 3,000 units to over 32,600 units in the week ending November 2.

One consideration when evaluating sales is stock availability. In countries such as Australia, the increase in sales was delayed by several weeks, likely due to a lack of availability. Similarly in Italy, while we see a continued growth in sales, the highest spike takes place three weeks after the win — again, likely due to availability issues. Even in Canada, there was a flurry of retailers needing to quickly replenish stock. One Globe and Mail article outlined that although retailers were caught short, in the case of Alice Munro, it is much easier for Canadian retailers to quickly and easily re-stock titles.¹

Of the reporting countries, all but two are reporting English-language editions of Munro books. Sales in Spain and Italy are primarily (but not entirely) comprised of translations of Alice Munro titles and the results are staggering — between the weeks of September 21 and October 26, Italy saw an increase of 4527% while Spain's was 3041%.

CANADIAN LITERARY AWARD COMPARISON

In comparison to other major national literary fiction awards in Canada, the increase in sales from the Nobel Prize is very significant. As mentioned, the increase for the Nobel Prize was 4424%.

For the 2012 award period, comparing sales during the week of the shortlist announcement to the week of the win for some of the major fiction awards we find:

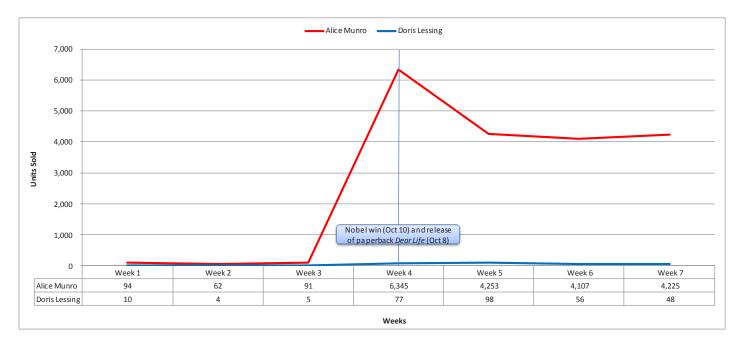

Canada Reads	4465%
Governor General's Award for Fiction	211%
Rogers Writers' Trust Fiction Prize	1085%
Scotiabank Giller Prize	6731%

¹ Ann Hui, "Book sellers, caught off guard by Alice Munro's Nobel Prize, scramble to stock shelves," The Globe and Mail, October 10, 2013, http://www.theglobeandmail.com/arts/books-andmedia/canadian-book-sellers-caught-off-guard-by-alice-munros-nobel-prize-scramble-to-stockshelves/article14810219/

BookNet Canada has an agreement with our publishers that we do not publicly release sales information on individual titles, so as a result we present our analysis as a percent increase. When dealing with percent increases we see considerable differences title-by-title and week-by-week. A book selling 5 copies that increases to 50 copies after a win sees an increase of 900%, whereas if it had been selling 10 copies and increased to 50 copies, the increase is only 400%. Percent increase is going to vary considerably depending on a title's availability and position in the market prior to any award win.

PAST NOBEL WINNERS

BNC SalesData has tracked book sales within Canada since late 2005. We found that between 2005 and 2012, there were several Nobel award–winners whose translations were not available in Canada until after the Nobel win. One winning author we are able to track is Doris Lessing, who won in 2007. The sum of Doris Lessing's sales increased 670% in the week of the win and up to 1780% four weeks after the win. The United States also saw significant increases, with sales of The Golden Notebook increasing to 1,100 copies per week from less than 50 in prior weeks.²

CONCLUSION

To Alice Munro we would like to send a virtual high five and a bear hug. Your win has not only increased book sales throughout Canada and internationally, but also caused ripple effects throughout the publishing industry. Perhaps this is a sign that Canadian literature has finally come of age alongside the more established canon of English and American literature. It is our hope that Canadian authors and works receive increasing recognition around the world, and that more countries join Italy and Spain in adding translations of Canadian books to their publishing programs. Canadian literature is deserving of a wider audience, both at home and abroad.

In addition, the benefits of winning a Nobel Prize in Literature extend beyond the nationality of the winner. As barriers of distance and language shrink and the global marketplace becomes ever smaller, literary awards play an increasingly significant role in celebrating and supporting literary culture around the world, and in introducing authors to ever-wider audiences.

ABOUT BOOKNET CANADA

BookNet Canada is the not-for-profit agency created by the Canadian book industry and the Department of Canadian Heritage to facilitate improvements in the book industry supply chain. It provides services and develops standards and certification in areas including electronic commerce via EDI (Electronic Document Interchange), bibliographic data, and analysis of point-of-sales and other supply chain data.

We acknowledge the financial support of the Government of Canada through the Canada Book Fund (CBF) for this project / Nous reconnaissons l'appui financier du gouvernement du Canada par l'entremise du Fonds du livre du Canada (FLC) pour ce projet

ABOUT NIELSEN BOOK

Nielsen Book is a leading provider of information, transaction and sales analysis services globally and runs the Registration Agencies (ISBN/SAN (UK & Ireland) ISTC), provides search and discovery products through its Nielsen BookData range, electronic trading via Nielsen BookNet and retail sales analysis via Nielsen BookScan.

Nielsen recently acquired the business Intelligence and commerce solutions products from Bowker consisting of: PubTrack[™] Digital, PubTrack[™] Christian, PubTrack[™] Higher-Ed, and Bowker Market Research Books & Consumers, Global Ebook Monitor and custom research. Commerce Solutions products: PubEasy[®] and Pubnet[®]. This acquisition will enhance Nielsen's Book solutions portfolio and brings deeper insights and improved efficiencies to the global book industry.
