

BOOKS+PUBLISHING

Stay up-to-date with Australia's publishing industry.
Sign up for a free trial to Books+Publishing.

HOME NEWS REVIEWS JOBS CLASSIFIEDS LIBRARIES PUBLICATIONS ADVERTISE

VIEW NEWSLETTERS

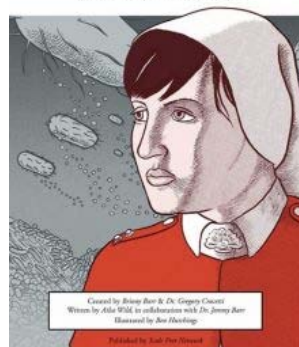

MY SUBSCRIPTION

Welcome back
Briony Barr

REVIEWS >

THE INVISIBLE WAR
A Tale on Two Scales

The Invisible War: A Tale on Two Scales
Ailsa Wild & Jeremy Barr, illus by Ben Hutchings
Scale Free Network
Stars: 3
Reviewed by Kevin Orrman-Rossiter
Released July 2016
Paperback
ISBN 9780992587253
RRP $29.95
Category: fiction

The Invisible War: A Tale on Two Scales (Ailsa Wild & Jeremy Barr, illus by Ben Hutchings, Scale Free Network)

21 June 2016

How much history and science can a reader learn from a graphic novel? This new art-science offering from publisher Scale Free Network suggests quite a lot! The Invisible War is graphic novel that introduces readers to both the microbiology of our gut and life on the Western Front during World War I. It covers several weeks in the life of Australian nurse Sister Annie Barnaby at a British casualty clearing station on the River Somme, just a few kilometres from the trenches at Pozieres. The horrors of trench warfare (artillery, bayonets and gas attacks) is juxtaposed with the assault on Barnaby's gut from the 'Shiga gang' or Shigella dysenteriae, the bacterium responsible for dysentery. The authors dramatically illustrate this hidden world of microbes, while further encouraging curiosity about the associated science and history. The story is also supported by an illuminating appendix. The Invisible War is a welcome addition to the small, but possibly growing, group of graphic novels underpinned by quality science and history reporting. It is well executed and recommended to those who favour unconventional learning.

Kevin Orrman-Rossiter is a freelance writer and book-reviewer, specialising in the historical and philosophical impacts of science

Category: Reviews

Choose your own content with Books+Publishing's new promotional newsletter...

Home

About
Editorial contacts
Editorial submissions
Terms and conditions
Privacy policy

News

Local news
International news
Features
Library news
B+P announcements
Notices
Agency changes
Moves/personnel
Bestsellers
Charts
Events

Reviews

View reviews
Reviews rating system

Jobs

View jobs
Place a job ad

Classifieds

View classifieds
Place a classified

Libraries

Library news
Library news international

Publications

Books+Publishing magazine
Think Australian Newsletters

Advertise

Place a classified or job ad
Magazine or online display advertising