REGISTRATION STUDENT ORGANIZATION
IDENTITY GUIDELINES

There are more than 700 student organizations at Michigan State University. The following guidelines have been created to assist groups in knowing the way the student organization can identify with the university.

Registered student groups are able to identify with Michigan State University in so much as:
1. The student group identifies as a student-based organization not to be confused with a University department, program or initiative;
2. The student group identity conforms to the guidelines herein and does not infringe on Michigan State University registered marks, athletic brand or intellectual property.

STUDENT ORGANIZATION NAMES

Registered student groups should include the word “club” or similar identifier in the naming of the organization. This will identify the group as a student-based organization and not a university department or office. Examples include Club, Society, Association, and/or Chapter. Examples of current groups at Michigan State include Academic Competition Club, Advertising Association and Black Student Alliance.

Further, to enhance identification with MSU, organizations should include the words “at Michigan State University” along with or as part of their organization’s name. Acceptable alternatives include “at Michigan State” or “at MSU.” For example “Accounting Club at Michigan State University.”

Student organizations may use the word “Spartans” or “Spartan” in their name, but it must be done in a way that does not construe or imply the university has taken an official position. For examples “Spartan Republican Club” is permissible but “Spartans for Nixon” would not be permissible.
