“Reich’s vision is so multi-layered and multi-valent. The beholder’s eye doesn’t look at a work of Reich as much as it travels through and territorializes her fine-tuned, orchestrated efforts. One doesn’t envisage optical phenomenon such as color, texture, and light as much as we encounter these aspects and facets of our experience as we sojourn in and through Reich’s works.”

“Finally it is nearly impossible to convey the luminous immateriality that makes itself evident in the artist’s work without referring to thresholds and liminal space, that in-betweeness of things, that sensation that comes from a space of otherness, a mental space sequestered from normative conditions of sight and insight.”

- Dominique Nahas / independent curator and critic based in New York City.
