From the Engine Room

When I hear “West Central Express,” I think of young journalists writing out sentences and paragraphs. The first time I heard talk of an Arts Edition, I nearly spit out my lettuce! Great comics have been part of these issues for years, but could students use other art forms to practice storytelling? After lots of pondering over parsnips and Earl Grey tea, I thought, “Fine - let’s give it a try. But it better be great.” And low and behold - it is!

Alongside excellent comics, there’s lots that’s new in this issue. I’m told there’s an art form called ‘conceptual art’ using nothing but writing and imagination. You’ll find examples among these pages – thought paintings, surreal recipes, and mirror monologues. Here’s a thought painting I wrote:

Imagine a warm lagoon on a bright moonlit night:
Stones stacked high with waterproof books,
A cozy seaweed desk with an amphibious typewriter.
Frame with pure gold. KNOW this is nirvana.

You’ll also see some unusual photography composed with a green screen. After our young artists were introduced to examples of surrealist photography, they took inspiration from dreams to compose these pieces together. Students thoughtfully produced paintings, sculptures, and collages for this issue, too!

An exceptional cartoonist, Bill Watterson, once said, “It’s not the medium, but the quality of perception and expression that determines the significance of art.” Our Level Up students put my doubts over the Arts Edition to rest. Great job – I can’t wait to see what’s next!

Sincerely,

Snoz

Allons-y and the Doctor: A Fan Fiction

One night, Allonsy found a fob watch down in the basement. It had weird inscriptions on it. She felt like she had seen it before but when she opened it up, she remembered everything all at once. Then she heard the whooshing of the TARDIS. She followed the sound to the forest. There was the TARDIS. The door was standing open.

Allonsy crept through the door of the time machine. The inside was big and shiny. The Doctor had his back turned to her but still somehow knew she was there. “How did YOU get in here?” he asked. “Well,” Allonsy answered, “You might want to check my heartbeat.”

The Doctor checked her heartbeat and looked more surprised than she even thought possible. She had TWO heartbeats just like him. “Because of the watch, I remembered that my family was from your planet but we took refuge on Earth during the Time War,” Allonsy explained.

“Where to?” Allonsy asked as they hurtled through the Time Vortex. “Oh, you know, just have to stop the Daleks from destroying the world real quick,” said the Doctor.

“Oh, so the usual.” She laughed. They landed in the thick of a battle but defeated the Daleks quickly with sonic screwdrivers before hopping back onto the TARDIS.

“Where do we go now?” Allonsy asked. “Anywhen/Anywhere we want…” answered the Doctor.

Cupcake & Lily

Once there was a lost kitten in a box, and it was raining! Later...

Bye, cupcake.

Yay!

Cupcake, I’m home!

I got something for you.

Oh, hey!

Meow.

5 years later...

“Hey, Cupcake. Do you want to play?”

I’ll do it.

Idea.

Party stuff.

Upstairs...

“Silly, are you done playing?”

“Uh... way.”

“Ok!”

“Come on!”

Notes from Staff

From Wilson, Program Director:

Every day I work with Level Up students, they surprise me with their incredible capacity for creativity, adaptability, and collaboration. Whether they’re brand new to our programs or third-year members, it seems like they never run out of ways to grow and innovate. Even third-year student faced new challenges working on this Arts Edition; it’s not easy to find an idea that truly inspires you and shape it into something you can share with the world! To make it happen, they worked together, took creative risks, and practiced applying a growth mindset when encountering limitations.

Throughout the process of transforming ideas into the conceptual art, photographs, cartoons, and other artifacts included in this issue, our students grew their sense of self, sense of community, and sense of confidence as artists and storytellers. I hope you find a sample of their spirit here and find yourself laughing, contemplating, narrating, and celebrating with these amazing kids. Thanks for reading!

A Note from MX Terra, Level Up Program Manager:

I am absolutely tickled purple by the adventure I am on with my friends at Spark Central. The opportunity to develop a new arts curriculum for our after school program, Level Up, has been a dream come true. In a former job where I tried to be a Batwoman (because police called me for help at night) I had to mentally go to my happy place a lot. Now I don’t need to go to my happy place because I work there with all these incredible students in Level Up. I believe that helping young artists find their expressive voice is every bit as important as emergency rescue work.

Creative problem solving is a self-rescuing skill that our students can call up whenever they face challenges in their lives. Huge shout out to Dr. Bedford who was our curriculum doula, Mr. Wilson Faust who was the first to suggest an arts focused edition to begin with, Nadia our designer and resident art gremlin, Krystianna our last minute art photographer, and to all our Level up mentors who work side by side with our students to guide and support their work. The best part of the job has been spending time with all of you - our Level Up artists!

THANKS TO OUR MENTORS!
