

Lines

By Sarah diGiovanna

Quiet, wistful lines running gently across the page slightly altered to match my imperfections.

They spelled words more beautiful than my own with more potential than my putrid problems:

loops and harsh black
fading
into nothingness
like black chemicals
written
across nature's grave.