

EvacuKids Hurricane and Hazards Risk Literacy In-school Intern

Evacuteer.org seeks to expand the implementation of the EvacuKids through partnerships local university students in New Orleans. These students will be trained in teaching the EvacuKids curriculum then partner with specific local elementary schools to teach EvacuKids lessons on a regular basis, increasing our outreach exponentially. Students will have the opportunity to engage with underserved youth in local schools, while providing valuable lessons on hurricane preparedness training, risk literacy, and general information on Louisiana weather and climate issues.

Interns should be flexible, comfortable teaching, and have experience working with children.

University student volunteers must be willing to commit to at least one semester of service during which they will:

- Receive formal training from Evacuteer staff on the EvacuKids curriculum and lesson plans
- Assist in the selection of partner schools in accordance with Evacuteer guidelines to ensure that the program is targeted at underserved populations. Schools may also be selected in coordination with the participating university and Evacuteer.org
- Conduct six one-hour lessons during a span of potentially 6-8 weeks (depends on the school schedule, testing, etc.)
- Gather feedback from participants in the form of pre-and-post lesson surveys, to then be combined into a final impact report at the end of the program
- Participate in evaluating the EvacuKids program by providing feedback to Evacuteer.org staff
