

Jazz singer hits high note at Frieze art fair

By Page Six Team
May 6, 2016 | 10:05pm

Jazzmeia Horn Getty Images

Singer Jazzmeia Horn performed at a sophisticated uptown party to celebrate Frieze New York art fair and The Post's latest Alexa issue Thursday.

The Thelonious Monk Institute International Jazz Competition winner crooned tunes at the duplex of Hyphen art consultancy founder Andrea Glimcher, who co-hosted the bash with The Post's publisher and CEO Jesse Angelo.

Guests included artists Will Ryman, Alexis Rockman and Adam Pendleton (whose work covered the dining-room walls), Pérez Art Museum Miami director Franklin Sirmans, Elizabeth Duggal, Bonin Bough, Cheryl Joseph, Mandy Hackett and Oksana Lada. For a Hennessy Paradis toast, Horn even helped tame the chatty crowd with an egg shaker.