Color Hunt
Grades Kinder & 1st

Students get a chance to explore the farm and make observations of the diversity and variety of colors found on the farm.

What You Need

What To Do

Before students arrive spend some time looking around and decide which colors of paint chips will be most appropriate to use. Store any you don’t plan to use out of the way so students don’t get confused.

Introduce yourself and the farm to the students. Learn student names. Explain that we are going to spend some time exploring the farm and finding colors. Have students close their eyes and ask them to suggest colors that they think they will be able to find on the farm. Ask if there are colors they don’t expect to be able to find.

Have students open their eyes and show them the paint chips. Encourage them to make observations about the many different shades of each color. Explain that each student will be given one chip and will explore the farm looking for items that match that color exactly. When they find the item, they need to ask the leader (you) if they can pick it or not. If not, they can bring the group to the item when we share.

Take a moment to clearly define the boundaries for the search and give them a signal (voice, drum, bell) to listen for when it is time to gather together again.

Give the students about 5 minutes to hunt. Wander around to answer questions or help them stay on task.

Gather the group together and have them share some of what they found. What was hard to find? Did they find other colors they didn’t expect?

Repeat with different colors if there is time.
