The International Vaccine Institute is hiring!

Policy & Economic Research Department

Work in a non-profit International Organization dedicated to Global Public Health

About IVI:
The International Vaccine Institute (IVI) is an independent non-for-profit international organization established in 1997 in Seoul, Republic of Korea, as an initiative of the United Nations Development Programme.

IVI’s mission:
Discover, develop, and deliver safe, effective and affordable vaccines for global public health

Visit www.ivi.int to learn more
The ideal candidate should possess the following qualifications:

- PhD in Applied Economics, Health Economics, Public Health, Health management or International Development. Medical background (MBBS/MD) is preferred
- 5+ years of experience in related field, particularly in low- and middle-income countries
- Technical and Professional Skills / Knowledge in health economics, statistical analysis, econometrics, forecasting, longitudinal data management.
- Proficiency in STATA or other statistical software is necessary
- Fluency in written and spoken English (other languages a plus)
- Excellent team skills!

This position will provide following opportunities:

- Living and working in Seoul, Korea
- Expanding work experience to low- and middle-income countries, multinational teams, and a wide range of project types, and a diverse array of external partners
- Career development opportunities in global health and within an international not-for-profit organization

How to apply

Visit IVI Homepage (https://www.ivi.int/careers/) and submit your application online.

Inquiries

For questions, please email recruitment@ivi.int.