MARIA HAIDAMUS INTERIORS

Drawn toward simplicity and organic design, Maria Haidamus shies away from projects that are overly intricate or “stuffed with objects,” as she puts it. “I love having one or two items that tie everything together.” Experienced in both residential and commercial renovations, Maria Haidamus Interiors simplifies the design process for clients, offering an understanding of complex projects from beginning to end. As a young girl, Haidamus spent much of her time moving furniture and repositioning art, informing her career move into design and architecture. “I never had any guessing phases,” she says. “Whenever I walk into a room, I immediately envision it in different ways.” Largely influenced by global travel, she immerses herself in the local art and architecture of the countries she visits, “enriching my internal library and imagination,” she says. So, when taking on any new project, she embraces the creative process, which includes problem solving and interacting with vendors, resources and artisans to come up with the best solutions for her clients. “I always listen, really listen, to my clients,” she says. “I believe they usually know deep down what they want; it’s my job to help them get there.” Inspired by her travels as well as client experiences, unique treasures and historical perspectives, Haidamus delivers creative, edgy designs reflective of her clients’ unique personalities.

Ask the Expert

What is inspiring you now?

I am inspired by San Francisco. The city continues to reinvent itself in the most creative ways, and I love discovering it all over again. However, ultimately, my inspiration comes from spending time with my next client.

How do you define luxury?

Luxury might sound glamorous or over-the-top, but I define it as warmth, comfort and simplicity.

What do you strive to create when you’re working on a project?

I always strive to improve flow, layout and overall functionality of a space, while preserving architectural integrity.

01. The clients requested a comfortable interior for their 1905 San Francisco home. Plush upholstery in bold colors adds warmth while contrasting the classic architecture. 02. Luxury and comfort come together in this Noe Valley Victorian home, where earthy tones and natural elements create an inviting space.
