For more than a decade, the Alliance for Historic Wyoming has devoted thousands of hours to preservation issues across the state. We work with federal, state, and local governments, nonprofits, and private individuals to make sure our history is preserved. We believe that historic places and spaces play a critical role in Wyoming’s future, and that our members are the best advocates for our heritage.

“We are called to historic restoration work to honor those who came before us and to preserve for future generations. The Alliance for Historic Wyoming has provided technical support and a community that helps us to feel like we are not alone in the sometimes daunting work of historic preservation.”

- Mary Wommack & Jim Mackenzie, F.S. King Brothers Ranch, Albany County

WITH YOUR HELP, HERE IS WHAT WE WERE ABLE TO ACCOMPLISH IN 2017:

National Historic Trails Tour: This year, we continued our efforts to protect historic emigrant trails. We partnered with the Oregon-California Trails Association on a tour of the South Pass Historic Landscape, and later attended a cooperator’s tour with local government officials working on a plan that will inform the next 20 years of land management in southwest Wyoming.

Unbarred Kaycee: AHW partnered with Kaycee’s Hoofprints of the Past Museum to offer a program on historic ranches, featuring AHW board member Trish Ullery-Whitaker’s historic ranch and meticulously preserved barn and chicken coop.

This Place Matters, Sheridan: AHW spent 3 days in Sheridan meeting with community volunteers, developers, and city and county officials to discuss a range of historic preservation issues and topics, and culminating in “Historic Sheridan!,” a public presentation on downtown architecture and rehabilitation. AHW returned to participate in “Redevelopment Funding and Revitalization Through Brownfields,” which focused on the historic Acme Power Plant.

This Place Matters, Green River/Rock Springs: AHW opened a dialogue with city and county officials on preserving the Green River Carnegie Library, met with county and federal officials regarding trail and viewshed protection, and toured historic rehab and adaptive use projects.

Merger with Tracks Across Wyoming: The 25-year-old preservation organization Tracks Across Wyoming has joined forces with AHW to expand heritage tourism promotion and transportation corridor protection statewide.

Cowboy Carnegie: AHW’s traveling exhibit on the history and significance of Wyoming’s Carnegie Libraries continued its tour of the state, with showings and public presentations in Cheyenne, Buffalo, Basin, Cody, Sheridan, and Green River.

Wells Fargo Tower, Casper: AHW provided critical support and statewide publicity to help preservationists in Casper persuade Wells Fargo Bank to preserve its iconic downtown tower.
