LUBUTO n. Enlightenment, Knowledge and Light

in Icibemba, the language of the Bemba people of Zambia and the Democratic Republic of the Congo “Lubuto” is a word in the Bemba language that signifies knowledge, enlightenment and light. Lubuto libraries provide a beacon of hope and learning to children in Africa whose futures have been darkened by the AIDS crisis.

The Lubuto Library Project’s mission is to create educational opportunities and a better life for children affected by HIV/AIDS in Africa. We do this by mobilizing young Americans to build and share collections of excellent books with Africa’s street children, and building libraries with services especially for them.

Even the most innovative agencies and programs attempting to meet the education needs of African orphans and street children work through an institutional framework (schools and education systems) that excludes millions of children due to their vulnerable life circumstances. Libraries can specifically target that out-of-school population with features that accommodate their special needs, and vulnerable children will know that they exist just for them.

The Lubuto Library Project is unique.

No other project targets vulnerable and AIDS-affected children and youth with accessible and proactive libraries as beautiful and safe havens throughout the region of sub-Saharan Africa where there are large numbers of young people at risk.

The Lubuto Library Project seeks to raise awareness in North America of the unprecedented and devastating impact HIV/AIDS has had on African children. The Project works with schools to set up awareness programs and organize teen volunteers to sort, select, organize and prepare book shipments. In the process, students learn about the circumstances of vulnerable children in Africa, as they make decisions about what books are appropriate to send.

The Lubuto Library Project is distinguished from traditional book donation programs.

The project is unique in providing complete library collections of excellent children’s books, already organized. On delivery, an instant library with books covering a wide range of subjects and levels is created, followed up with training for the staff that will run it. The books will have been carefully selected from materials received by donation to ensure that the collection is balanced and comprised of top quality materials, age-appropriate and truly excellent. They are housed in a beautiful, traditional African building designed and built by the Lubuto Project.

Volunteers creating the collections are guided by a detailed collection development policy drafted with one of the U.S.’s top experts in children’s literature, a member of the Lubuto Library Project’s Board of Directors. The libraries in Africa will also provide feedback on the materials sent, and local staff will be trained to maintain the libraries and offer and evaluate services. Local-language materials are also identified and obtained for the collections.

Officials from UNICEF, USAID, the World Bank and other organizations endeavoring to assist vulnerable children have been frustrated that so many children are beyond the reach of educational programs and have endorsed this approach. The Lubuto Project is needed to fill a gap, helping vulnerable populations in Africa just as public libraries in the United States have done for immigrant groups for over a century.
Much has happened with the Lubuto Library Project since our official launch in January 2005. With the help of many talented and committed professionals and volunteers, we have established Lubuto as a solid, respected 501(c)(3) organization, built an excellent first book collection with more collections to follow, and, most exciting, constructed our first library in Lusaka, Zambia.

In this our first annual report, we lay out the foundation of our organization and milestones we have achieved since the beginning.

The Lubuto Project grew from the great success of a makeshift library established in a converted shipping container at the Fountain of Hope drop-in shelter in Lusaka, Zambia, in 2001. The library offers local street children a safe place of refuge, where they can look at books, listen to stories, learn to read or hone their skills, or simply be with others who care about them. During the years that followed, of more than 500 street children that came each day to the shelter, many crowded into the library and it was instrumental in enabling a number of those children to pass the secondary school exam.

With this as a model, we developed the concept of building high quality, culturally appropriate book collections, covering a wide range of subjects, that can be housed in specially built libraries and serve these hard-to-reach children. Because the Project was ‘born’ in Zambia and because of our knowledge of the country, its cultures and its vulnerable children, we chose Zambia as the site for our first libraries. In the past two years, we have made much progress, and now we aim to build 100 Lubuto Libraries in Zambia.

We worked hard to develop an organization that could support the assembly and classification of book collections in the U.S. and the building and establishment of libraries in Zambia. These efforts required wide-ranging help from nongovernmental organizations, U.S. schools, civic entities and many, many volunteers.

Building the First Lubuto Library

The work in Africa is led by the Project’s regional field director, Eleni Coromvli, a U.S.-educated architect with substantial professional experience in Zambia, who developed the prototype library design. Based in Lusaka, Eleni is responsible for overseeing the design and construction of the libraries and managing the field operations of the Lubuto Project.

Eleni’s design follows the traditional layout of Zambian homesteads. It consists of three round thatched structures: a reading room to house the book collection, an activities room and a transition/entrance structure. The reading room can house a collection of some 10,000 books and 50 children will be able to use the library at one time.

The Fountain of Hope wrote to us in July of 2005 and requested to host the first Lubuto Library. During the summer of 2006, a team of University of San Francisco “Community Architecture” student volunteers and their professor Seth Wachtel went to Zambia to get on-site experience as we began construction of the first library. The opportunity to be involved in the initial aspects of our first library construction and meet directly with street children was life-changing for them. Under Eleni’s supervision, builder Paul Snarr’s Zambian crew has carried out the construction, sometimes joined by the street kids themselves. The building was recently completed and the library will open soon. It is gratifying to see the first library become a reality in Zambia.
U.S. school support for book collections

Donated books are a key component of building the Lubuto Libraries’ core collections. Since March 2005, adult and student volunteers working with Washington, D.C. area schools, libraries and organizations have solicited donations of appropriate and high quality books.

In order to educate U.S. school children about the impact that AIDS has had on their sub-Saharan African peers, the Project developed a program for high school students. The learning is reinforced as students sort, select and classify books for Lubuto collections. Adult volunteers oversee the students’ activities, and volunteer librarians provide instruction in selecting and organizing the books. To guide the volunteers and help them know more about the children they are helping, we produced a short video on the Project, narrated by highly respected educator and civil rights leader Julian Bond.

The books we collect provide a wide range of choices for boys and girls from early childhood through age 18 whose first language is likely not English. We emphasize hardcover, informational books with clear, compelling illustrations. Fiction and picture books must transcend cultural differences. Nonfiction books include illustrated books about nature, science, sports, crafts, technology, geography, history, biography, music and art that will serve as inspiration about our world, increasing children’s understanding of themselves and others.

To date, U.S. high school students have collected over 6,500 books, 3,000 of which will be included in our first 5,000-volume shipment to our new library in Lusaka. Those books not usable have been donated elsewhere, including a large donation to singer Faith Hill’s efforts to provide reading materials to children in Mississippi displaced by Hurricane Katrina.

Looking ahead

As we look forward into 2007, we are tracking to our plans. Our first library in Lusaka will open soon. We plan to begin building and developing collections for at least two additional libraries in Zambia in early 2007, in Kitwe and Monze. Following these initial projects, we will continue to build libraries in Zambia and eventually expand to neighboring countries.

New partnerships will allow us to scale up rapidly in the near future. In the U.S., supporters at the National Geographic Society have recognized the uniqueness and professionalism of our approach. They are currently helping Lubuto with large scale donations of excellent books from many publishers, shipping, development of the Schools Program, and other communications and logistical support that could only be provided by individuals at such a world-recognized educational institution. In Zambia, the advent of the first library is generating significant interest from businesses, individuals, and international and governmental agencies. We are working hard to cultivate partnerships with these organizations that will allow us to build 100 libraries in Zambia and expand into additional countries in Africa. Professional librarian volunteers in both the U.S. and Africa are working with us to ensure that our roll-out happens effectively and according to the highest standards. Student involvement, both in Zambia and the U.S., will carry our message to the next generation.

We are proud that so much of our support has come from librarians, publishers and book dealers, a knowledgeable group that helps us maintain our standard of excellence. I am very happy to announce that the Lubuto Library Project was selected for inclusion in the Catalogue for Philanthropy 2006-07, which features the best innovative, trustworthy and excellent nonprofits in the Washington, DC area.

Our success thus far would not have been possible without the generous support Lubuto has received from government and academic institutions, businesses, countless student and adult volunteers and individuals around the world who have learned of our project. We have provided a list of our volunteers and supporters in this report. On behalf of the Lubuto Board of Directors, I would like to extend my heartfelt thanks to everyone involved in this project who has worked so hard and donated so selflessly. We are pleased with the progress we have made thus far, and we look forward to reporting to you in the future.

The Lubuto Library
Testimonial Excerpts

“I am most impressed with the planning and the passion behind the Lubuto Library Project. It truly is innovative in its approach, tailored to unusual needs at an unusual and especially trying time in the history of southern Africa. It also is a new and meaningful way of using books (delivered as library collections), knowledgeable volunteers, and networks of appropriate organizations and individuals to battle AIDS, poverty, and homelessness.”

John Y. Cole
Director
Center for the Book
U.S. Library of Congress

“The Lubuto Library Project will bring a safe haven and culturally and age-appropriate books to a population so socially deprived that their very existence is in question. Help is vitally needed; the Lubuto Library Project offers to thousands of children the only place in which they can feel safe, read books and in many cases simply be quiet.”

Joan R. Challinor
Former Chair
U.S. National Commission on Libraries and Information Science

“I have been wanting a dictionary and a place to study, and now I see that the new library is really coming and it is very good for me.”

David, age 15
Fountain of Hope Shelter, Lusaka, Zambia

“You might have seen the Lubuto Library in photos, but if you see it for yourself physically, then you can understand the new face Fountain of Hope has for children’s knowledge. The library is a big happening to all of us associated with children in Zambia. I can’t express my happiness by writing but I can assure you this is what children need when we talk about children’s facilities in the rehabilitation process.”

“Each year, Joto Junior High School organizes a fundraiser for HIV/AIDS and the people affected by it. In Japan, there is a fundraising event called GO-EN Dama. This fundraiser asks students to bring in as many 5 yen coins as they can in a week… The written characters for “goen” in the Japanese language means ‘a strong connection between people.’ …By raising money using five yen coins … the Japanese students feel as though they are helping financially as well as creating a special connection spiritually with people infected with or [affected] by HIV/AIDS.”

“…[Volunteering with the Lubuto Project] gives me a way to contribute to making the world a better place – and allows me to understand how my actions are directly helping others.”

Many talented volunteers, in the U.S. and in Zambia, make a big difference to the Lubuto Library Project. From developing innovative programs for our libraries to offer, to soliciting, collecting, selecting, classifying and preparing books for Lubuto collections, helping to get our project and systems up and running, raising funds, networking, and generally supporting the project in many different ways, our volunteers give generously of their time and talents to make Lubuto Libraries a place of safety, hope and learning for African orphans and street children. We particularly want the U.S. volunteers to know that their hard work and caring are greatly appreciated by Zambians, especially by those who will be the direct beneficiaries of their efforts.

We offer all our volunteers our heartfelt thanks and appreciation.

Zambia’s National Library Week 2006 took place during the first week of December. Members of the Zambia Library Association (ZLA) awarded Jane Meyers honorary ZLA membership and voted to go during that week, as volunteers, to the Fountain of Hope shelter to help her get the first Lubuto Library up and running. Library Science students and their teacher from the University of Zambia showed up each day in large numbers, learned about Lubuto Libraries, joined in with the training of Fountain of Hope staff, and reviewed the entire collection from the 2001 container library to determine which books might still be useful for the new Lubuto Library. It was hard work, but the students’ interest in joining our efforts to bring excellent libraries to Zambia’s vulnerable children saw them through the entire project, and many have signed up to be regular volunteers with Lubuto Libraries.

The following University of Zambia (UNZA) volunteers participated during National Library Week:

Naomy Mtanga (Lecturer)  Darlington C. Chama  Moonga Mweetwa
Agrepa Banda  Webster Chisaka  Mutale Mwango
Chishimba M. Brighton  Chishala Kapesa  Kaite (Aggie) Mwanza
Wisdom Bwalya  David E. Mkandawire  Pingwe Nkandu

These additional UNZA students and others volunteered for future involvement and work with Lubuto Libraries:

Precious Kabaso  Patricia Mukuka  Darla Raskin (Fulbright)
Maud Mate Kamwengo  Nancy Mukupa  Esnart Sitali
Mulenga Kayabwe  Katundu Mwangala  Austin Mwange
Moses Kayamba  Lubinda Mwikwanu
Members of the Zambian business community came together to mobilize in-kind and financial support for Lubuto Library efforts, as well as to volunteer at Lubuto Libraries to work with the street children. Former Trade and Commerce Minister and Member of Parliament, prominent businessman Dipak Patel is spearheading efforts to engage the business community. We are looking forward to support from Barclays Bank and other business entities. Priscilla Frost-d’Elbee of Associated Printers Ltd. and Claire Chan of Jagoda Gems have formed a “Friends of Lubuto Libraries” group, offering in-kind assistance, reading/literacy work with the street children and organizing fundraising efforts to support the Lubuto Library Project.

Volunteers to establish a Zambian Chapter of the International Board on Books for Young People

Thanks to encouragement and support from Marilyn Hollinshead and Anne Pellowsky of the U.S. Board on Books for Young People, the Lubuto Library Project is spearheading the establishment of a Zambian Board on Books for Young People, which will promote the publication of excellent and beautifully-illustrated children’s books in Zambian languages. The following citizens and residents of Zambia, among others, will comprise the initial membership:

Eleni Coromvli
Field Director

Eleni Coromvli, a practicing architect in Zambia, is a Greek national who has made her home and family life in Zambia. Her doctoral and masters’ studies at the University of California at Berkeley emphasized the ‘building process,’ an integrated process of building comprised of design, construction and user’s participation, and urban design. Eleni has extensive experience in architecture/urban design and construction management, gained through participation in numerous and diverse architectural projects on three continents (Europe, North America and Africa). Eleni’s interest in applying her architectural knowledge and talents to Zambia has given her an understanding that is particularly suited to the needs of the Lubuto Library Project. She acquired valuable knowledge of Zambian community life patterns and problems through extensive social research into various communities in several parts of the country. She has an in-depth understanding of vernacular Zambian architecture and significant experience in incorporating indigenous spatial patterns and building techniques into modern building. Eleni also is very familiar with the lives and needs of street children as a result of her work over the years with the Fountain of Hope in Lusaka.

Matildah Sakala
Consultant Librarian

Matildah Sakala has been the Director of the Martin Luther King, Jr. Memorial Library and Information Resource Center of the U.S. Embassy in Zambia since 1994. Before assuming that position, she was College Librarian at Zambia’s Natural Resources Development Center for almost a decade. She earned her professional qualification at the University of Zambia. Matildah has been a leader in the library profession in Zambia, and has also been trained in HIV/AIDS counseling and peer education. She brings this understanding of how best to serve disadvantaged groups to bear in the development of the Lubuto Library Project’s services to vulnerable children. Matildah was awarded a 2005 Diversity Leadership Development Program Award in 2005 from the Special Libraries Association (SLA), the only recipient from outside of the U.S.

Professor Maurice Lundu
Consultant Librarian

Professor Maurice Lundu, retired from positions of University Librarian at the Copperbelt University and teaching in the Department of Library and Information Studies at the University of Zambia, is a leader in African librarianship. He received his Masters and PhD degrees in Library and Information Science at Case Western University in the U.S. and the University of Sheffield in the U.K. Maurice has published more than 30 articles and three books, and is the recipient of various fellowships, awards and appointments that have allowed him to work and travel widely throughout Africa and elsewhere in the world. Yet he has maintained a profound dedication to Zambia and the people of Africa. While he is working to establish a technology institute in his hometown of Kasama, Zambia, he sees his involvement in the Lubuto Library Project as another important way in which he can contribute to his people and his country’s development.
Jane Kinney Meyers, Chairman of the Board
President, Lubuto Library Project, Inc., Washington, DC

Jane Meyers is a professional librarian with over 20 years’ experience working with and living in Africa. She lived and worked in Malawi for nearly four years on a World Bank project, developing a network of research libraries for the country’s Ministry of Agriculture and pioneering CD-ROM applications for Africa in the mid-1980’s. Ten years later she returned to neighboring Zambia, where she became increasingly involved with services to street children offered by the Fountain of Hope, a drop-in shelter in Lusaka. She established a reading program, served on the Board, raised funds, and created a library for the children, among her many contributions to the center. On her return to the U.S. in 2001, she developed the concept, approach and organization of the Lubuto Library Project. Most of Jane’s professional career has been involved with international development, particularly in the agricultural sector. She worked in that capacity at the World Bank and the U.S. National Agricultural Library, for USAID, and as a consultant to a number of international organizations.

NOTE 1 — ORGANIZATION AND OPERATIONS

The Lubuto Library Project, Inc. (the "Project") is a 501(c) (3) charitable organization, incorporated in the District of Columbia on January 25, 2005. It was launched in January 2005 to improve the lives and future prospects of AIDS orphans and other vulnerable children (OVC) in Africa by providing libraries, as well as to educate U.S. school children about the impact AIDS has on their African peers.

The Project’s mission is to provide (OVC) with a safe haven and a variety of stimulating culturally and age-appropriate books. Books are collected and sorted by American students and shipped to Africa. Lubuto works with host institutions in-country to adapt existing space or construct new library buildings, based on a prototype architectural plan. They are focusing their initial efforts in Zambia with plans to expand into other African countries in future years.

Lubuto libraries are envisioned as a safe and special place where children can read for themselves, look at books or have books read to them. The book collections are designed to appeal to a range of ages, interests and reading abilities, offering enrichment on many levels. The libraries will include the donated books in English as well as books purchased by the Project in local African languages and books created by the children themselves.

The organization’s primary activities are: building libraries, working through their regional office which is a registered nonprofit charitable organization in Zambia; soliciting donated books, selecting excellent and appropriate books from among the donations and organizing them for the African libraries; and raising awareness of the effect of HIV/AIDS on African children through school programs, educational materials and presentations. In the U.S., this entails an extensive volunteer mobilization effort.

The Project established a branch in the Republic of Zambia on September 21, 2005.

NOTE 2 — SUMMARY OF SIGNIFICANT ACCOUNTING POLICIES

Basis of Accounting
The financial statements of the Project have been prepared on the accrual basis of accounting and, accordingly, revenues and expenses are recognized in the period to which they relate.

Use of Estimates
The preparation of financial statements in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles requires management to make estimates that affect certain reported amounts and disclosures. Accordingly, actual results could differ from those estimates.

Basis of Presentation
In accordance with SFAS No. 117, Financial Statements of Not-for-Profit Organizations, Lubuto reports information regarding its financial position and activities according to three classes of assets: unrestricted net assets, temporarily restricted net assets, and permanently restricted net assets. Lubuto does not have any permanently restricted net assets.

Contributions
Contributions are accounted for in accordance with Statement of Financial Accounting Standards (SFAS) No. 116, Accounting for Contributions Received and Contributions Made. Contributions received are recorded as unrestricted, temporarily restricted, or permanently restricted, depending on the existence and/or nature of any donor restrictions. Contributions that are restricted by donors are reported as increases in unrestricted net assets if the restrictions expire in the reporting period in which the contributions are recognized. Contributed services and property and equipment are recorded at the estimated fair value of such services and property and equipment.

Cash and cash equivalents
Cash and cash equivalents consist of a checking account at a commercial bank in Washington, D.C.

Property, Equipment and Depreciation and Amortization
Property and equipment are carried at cost. The Project capitalizes all acquisitions of property and equipment over $500. Depreciation and amortization of property and equipment is calculated using the straight-line method over useful lives of three to five years.

Library Construction Costs
Library construction costs are recorded as an expense because the African host organization will own the library.

Income Taxes
The Project is exempt from the payment of income taxes on its exempt activities under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code.

Reclassification
Certain balances at December 31, 2005 have been reclassified to conform to the 2006 presentation.
NOTE 3 — RELATED PARTY TRANSACTIONS AND BALANCES
