Adapted from the May 2015 issue of the Ambassador, a publication of the Aber Suzuki Center, University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point

• Discover fresh insights and new approaches to your instrument and music through study with expert clinicians.

• Work with teachers of national and international reputation.

• Continue to hear the inspiration of the Suzuki message “every child can learn” given the proper environment.

• Realize substantial improvement and confidence on your instrument in a short period of time for all students, from pre-twentakers to advanced level players.

• Experience the balance between time spent playing your instrument and play (free) time.

• Make friends who are kindred spirits.

• Meet families and teachers from many states and foreign countries. Last year, one institute had 32 states and 6 foreign countries represented!

• Receive fresh motivation and renewed excitement about playing and practicing.

• Be immersed in a nurturing, positive atmosphere where individual value and potential is recognized.

• Attend inspiring performances by faculty and fellow students.

• Feel the exhilaration of playing in an orchestra or chamber music.

• Develop the essential skills of ensemble playing through chamber music.

• Learn and be inspired by hearing a wide variety of levels of playing on your instrument.

• Perform in final concerts of 50-200 performers, depending upon the institute.

• Be surrounded in a nurturing, positive atmosphere where individual value and potential is recognized.

• Institutes with teen options often include teen dorm opportunities and special advanced student offerings.

• Hear fresh ideas of how to practice and motivate!

• Take advantage of quality time with your child or grandchild. Create lifetime memories in an environment free from the stress and distractions of home and work.

• Find support and new solutions in helping your child through attending outstanding parent talks offered throughout the week.

• Explore the area surrounding the institute itself—whether a metropolitan setting or mountainous location.

• Be exposed to different events—from Fun Night to Concerto Night! Some institutes even have pajama play-ins and BBQ nights around the pool! Others may have faculty skits as well as serious performances.

• Build camaraderie and connections within your teaching studio by having your students attend an institute together. Some studios even reserve a dorm wing to build community!

• Be re-inspired by attending one of the many teacher training classes offered.

• Visit the “Suzuki Institute Store”. Some institutes have resources onsite, such as an “institute store” of Suzuki materials. Others may have a luthier, where you can try out instruments and secure basic services to keep your instrument sounding its best.

• Experience a well-organized and planned event. Did you know that most institute staff spend twelve months getting ready for your summer experience?
