ICE Cellphone Policy (Susan)

- 2 studies:
  - Undergrads at University of Texas
    - Performance of students on a test with cell phones in the room vs cell phones in another room. Students with cell phones out of the room vastly outperformed students with cell phones turned off on their desk.
  - Cellphones don't necessarily make students safer in a crisis situation

- Could we hold a town hall meeting to discuss possibilities for ways of handling smartphones at school
  - e.g. “Away for the day” (smartphones put away until end of school day)

- Discussion of issues/concerns:
  - Difficult for parents to reach their child by calling the ICE main office
  - Adding burden to teachers (collecting and distributing phones)
  - This is a Pete/Mark issue — the policy has only been in effect for 2–3 weeks — not enough time as yet to see how well it’s working for students to get used to it. Let’s give it additional time before evaluate how well it’s working before PTA gets involved

- Makes intuitive sense that we want our kids to have phones, be reachable. We have options that we can start to do — we can share information, share research, show Screenagers again, and allow families to talk to their kids about the information and make decisions that work for their families.
