Friends of Thomas Balch Library, Inc., 12th Annual Meeting – January 18, 2009

Despite chilly and nasty weather on January 18, more than 30 members and guests of the Friends of Thomas Balch Library met at Thomas Balch Library to elect their new board. They also said farewell to departing board members, while welcoming new additions. (See page 4, Welcome from new Board President, Lewis Leigh, Jr.)

Of great interest and enjoyment was an illustrated talk by Dr. Donald R. Kennon, chief historian of the United States Capitol Historical Society. He is co-editor of the Ohio University Press series Perspectives on the History of Congress 1789-1801 and editor of the series Perspectives on the Art and Architectural History of the United States Capitol.

A synopsis of his remarks, unfortunately without his wonderful illustrations:

PRESIDENTIAL INAUGURATIONS, PAST & PRESENT

Shortly after noon on January 20, 2009, Barack Obama will take the oath of office as the 44th President of the United States of America. The 20th Amendment to the Constitution provides that the term of the President begins at noon on January 20; however, before executing the powers of the office the President must take the following oath as specified in Article II, section 1 of the Constitution:

“I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the Office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States.”

Prior to 1937, Inauguration Day was set on March 4. The first inauguration, however, didn't take place on March 4, 1789, but nearly two months later on April 30. Because Congress met in Federal Hall, Washington went there to take the oath of office. Because no Supreme Court justices had been appointed, the oath was administered by Robert Livingston, Chancellor of New York State. The Bible used in the ceremony had been borrowed from nearby St. John's Masonic Lodge when none could be found in Federal Hall.

The first inauguration to take place at the Capitol in Washington, D.C., was one of the most significant in our history. Thomas Jefferson's March 4, 1801 inauguration was the first instance in which the presidency changed political parties. It was also the result of the first time an election had to be decided by the House of Representatives. The semicircular Senate Chamber was crowded with spectators as Jefferson gave his inaugural address, carefully worded to reassure his Federalist opponents that “We are all Republicans, we are all Federalists.”

In 1829 the inauguration of Andrew Jackson moved the ceremony to the East Portico of the Capitol. Because of the crowd at the Capitol's east front, a ship's cable had been stretched across the stairs to keep the crowd back. At the close of the ceremony, the crowd pressed forward to greet Jackson, the cable broke and the President had to leave by the west door where he mounted a horse and rode back to the White House.

The Capitol's East Front remained the usual site for Presidential inaugurations until 1981. Lincoln's first inauguration in 1861 took place in an atmosphere of danger and apprehension. The Capitol was still a work in progress—the cast-iron dome was still under construction. Its completion, Lincoln is reported to have said later, was a sign that the Union would survive the Civil War.

Lincoln's second inaugural, 1865, came just as the Civil War was drawing to a close. A war-weary President ennobled the occasion with his inaugural address which many consider the greatest speech in American history. His second inaugural address is a somber, deeply-felt, and articulate meditation on the meaning of the Civil War to the soul of America. The last paragraph, beginning “With malice toward none, with charity for all” is the most famous of any Presidential Inaugural speech.

In 1981, the inauguration of Ronald Reagan was moved to the West Front of the Capitol, setting a new precedent that continues to this day. The West Front location provides more space for spectators and a larger platform for dignitaries; but most of all, with its sweeping vista of the Mall, the West Front is best suited for televising the event and permitting the new President his first opportunity to demonstrate that most important of qualities, being “presidential.”

Newspapers: Rich Material for the Patient Researcher

Whether researching a genealogy or exploring a particular historical era, newspapers can be a bonanza of information. They provide an understanding of the issues of the day, national and local events, estate transactions, property sales and business advertisements. Also to be found are births, marriages, deaths, public opinions in letters to the editor, and politics of the day. Access to this treasure trove at Thomas Balch Library may through pages of hard copy, available at the library, microfilm, or online. Whatever your interest, it most likely will be satisfied here. Knowledgeable staff is always ready to assist you in your search. Here's a sample of newspaper holdings at Thomas Balch Library:

Black History Month Honored with Special Exhibit at Library

February, traditionally set aside to honor Black History Month, is marked this year with an exhibit at Thomas Balch Library. entitled African Americans: Their Role in Loudoun's History. Assembled by committee member Louis Jett, it features photos and other documents contributed by local families that represent the rich culture contributed to Loudoun County.

Unforgotten: Slave Quarters and Other African American Sites, an exhibit of paintings by Sherry Zvares Sanabria, continues through March 17, 2009. Presented by The George Washington University Virginia Campus and the Gallery 222/Loudoun Academy of the Arts Foundation, her luminous and haunting images are on display at 44983 Knoll Square, Ashburn, Virginia. Don't miss it.

TO THE PUBLIC

The present number of the True American compleats this year. The contracted limits of this paper (as it now appears) won't admit of a copious detail of foreign & domestic news, the Editor wishing to please the public and also make the paper as pleasing a fit vehicle, for the most important and useful matter: he proposes in as short a time as possible to change his present size of printing paper, into a royal size. His present resource to feed the press with all her necessary exigencies incident to this addition, are sensations not a little interesting, but trusting as he does, upon the free and good will of his patrons; hope to meet their decided opinions for the enlargement, Introductions of a literary, moral or political nature, will meet with a due reception from him. As foreign news is generally looked after by the public, I shall let its exertion be wanted with me in detection of the earliest, the most important, impartially. As Congress has commenced her official proceedings an investigation of their works must be looked for and nicely attended to, by everyone who feels a warmth for the good of his country, which I trust all Americans feel. This town being the second nearest to the City of Washington, of any other in Virginia where a paper is published, it is to be presumed, that news contained in this paper will be earlier than another, at the price of two dollars per year.

I cannot conclude without observing I appreciate their encouraging conduct to their

The Director's Letter

It gives me great pleasure to announce that as of Tuesday February 3, Thomas Balch Library is able to provide researcher access to JSTOR in-house. Journal Storage (JSTOR) is an interdisciplinary archive of academic journals across the humanities, social sciences as well as select monographs and other materials. It is full text searchable, offers search term highlighting, includes images, and is interlinked by millions of citations and references. Our subscription focusing on arts and humanities includes more than five hundred titles in forty disciplines. This subscription was made possible by a generous donation ($3000) from the Friends of TBL, Inc., to cover the cost of installation. TBL will cover the cost ($750) of the annual subscription. This online subscription is one of eight in-house on-line subscriptions offered to researchers. The others include: Access NewspaperArchive.com; American: History and Life; AncestryLibrary Edition; Digital Sanborn Maps, 1867-1970 – Virginia only; Footnote.com; HeritageQuest Online; and New England Historic Genealogical Society. A rack card illustrating TBL's electronic resources is available on request.

The Balch Column for Winter/Spring 2009 listing classes, lectures and exhibits, was distributed in January. Additional copies are available in the library or on request or it may be viewed on the library website. In addition, all the events have been posted to the Town web calendar. Following the November Loudoun County History Awards ceremony, the History Award Brochure was revised to include names of 2008 awardees. These brochures are also available at the library or online at the library website.

The Leesburg 250th Anniversary Lecture series concluded in November. In December, Loudoun Restoration and Preservation Society awarded a $3000 grant to assist in the publication of a Leesburg 250 Booklet/DVD. Recordings of the lectures series are currently being professionally mixed and we still anticipate a late 2009 release date.

Outreach to the Loudoun County Public Schools has been on-going. During February. Working with the Thomas Balch Library Advisory Commission, introductory meetings were held Feb 2 and 4 with Loudoun County Public School Library Media Specialists. We then hosted a meeting Feb 18 of LEMA, the library educator's professional organization. An introduction to the online subscriptions and other resources was provided along with a tour of the facility. It is hoped that a similar program can be arranged for the private school librarians.

Matthew Exline, who completed an internship with us last year, submitted a copy of a documentary "A Town and its Railroad" to the Library in fulfillment of our collection use policy. This was completed as a project for a film class. In reviewing the DVD I was struck at how thoughtful a presentation it was and inquired if he would be willing to share his experiences in creating the documentary with the staff. He agreed and his presentation was outstanding. Those present, including Town Manager, John Wells, and Francis Fera, Chair of the Thomas Balch Library Advisory Commission, were suitably impressed. As a Library Director it is always helpful to be able to show others such outstanding products of research in special collection libraries.

It is a living illustration of the significance to a community of historical collections. Those who viewed this DVD learned about Purcellville as a railroad town and saw firsthand the type of products that can result from research in libraries like Thomas Balch Library.

The 2009 Virginia Forum, a two-day conference devoted to all aspects and time periods of Virginia history, will be held at Longwood University, Farmville, April 24-25, 2009. Thomas Balch Library will be well represented at the forum with James Hershman, Douglas Foard and I as participants in several programs; Deborah Lee has served on the program committee.

There is considerable activity at the library – by frequently checking our website; you will be able to keep up with our activities, research collection additions, and events. As always it will be my pleasure to welcome you when visiting Thomas Balch Library or when attending our programs.

Alexandra S. Gressitt, Library Director

To The Friends of Thomas Balch Library:

First, a welcome and thank you to the new members of the Board of Directors of the Friends: David LeRoy, Phil Lo Presti, Lynn Maurer, Ron Rust and Suzi Worsham. They are joining a hard-working and dedicated group.

We enter the year 2009 with both a sense of achievement for what we have accomplished during the past, and with trepidation for what might lie just ahead.

However, to borrow a phrase that served our country well some years ago, "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself."

Our country's economy will thrust some serious and challenging changes on our library, and each of us must strive to keep this valuable facility moving forward and in the right direction. We need your time and your talents even more, during these trying times, to help make the best even better. This means more of you must step forward to become hands-on members, to serve on the Friends' committees, and to participate in our programs. To paraphrase Uncle Sam's, "I Need You", on that famous recruiting poster, "We Need You!"

Keep informed by reading the Thomas Balch Chronicle and The Balch Column closely each issue. Each provides news of programs of education, fellowship and opportunities to serve. The Friends of Balch Library is only what your help makes it. Your contribution in time, talent and gifts will return to you, personally, a more than even exchange. We have a great Board of Directors dedicated to carrying out our mission of support for Thomas Balch Library, which I share with you once again:

The objectives of the Friends shall be:

- A. To promote awareness of and interest in Thomas Balch Library of Leesburg, Virginia.
- B. To engage in activities which improve access, facilitate research, and preserve records used in the field of genealogy and local history.
- C. To educate the membership and the public through publications, projects and programs.
- D. To provide support to Thomas Balch Library and its programs.
- E. To attract community resources to make those programs possible.

2009 will not be all work, I promise you. There will great fellowship with kindred-minded people, topped off in the Fall by a great celebration evening at the newly renovated Morven Park. Please join us there and at our educational lectures during the year.

Sincerely,

Lewis Leigh, Jr., President
