AGO announces acquisitions of works by Tacita Dean, Dominique Gonzalez-Foerster, Silke Otto-Knapp, Hito Steyerl and more

New acquisitions continue the AGO’s multi-year focus on presenting and collecting work by women artists

TORONTO — The Art Gallery of Ontario (AGO) announced today it has acquired major works by internationally renowned artists Tacita Dean, Dominique Gonzalez-Foerster, Silke Otto-Knapp, Hito Steyerl, and a collaboration by Laakkuluk Williamson Bathory and Jamie Griffiths.

Dean’s Antigone (2018) is an hour-long 35mm film collage that draws on the character of Sophocles’ ancient play and presents a parallel narrative built around Dean’s sister. OPERA (QM.15) (2016) by Gonzalez-Foerster is a holographic projection—what the artist calls an “apparition”—in which she takes on the appearance and voice of the opera singer Maria Callas. Monotones (Seascape) (2016), Silke Otto-Knapp’s four-panel watercolour of the Newfoundland coast, is part of the artist’s distinctive series done in shades of black, grey and silver. First seen at the Bienale de Sao Paola in 2016, Steyerl’s Hell Yeah We Fuck Die is a video installation and architectural environment, currently on view as part of the AGO exhibition Hito Steyerl: This is the future. Layering sound, images, and dance into a unique doubled-sided video projection, Silaup Putunga (2018), by Williamson Bathory and Griffiths, is the first moving image installation by an Inuk artist to enter the AGO’s Collection.

These acquisitions build on the AGO’s concerted effort to focus on both collection-building and exhibitions of works by women artists. Over the last five years, 79 of the museum’s 189 purchased artworks—or 41% of purchased acquisitions—were by women artists. And in the last three years, 46% of the AGO’s 54 distinct exhibitions or special installations have been focused on women artists. This includes shows and acquisitions of works by artists such as Rebecca Belmore, Vija Celmins, June Clark, Yayoi Kusama, Rita Letendre, and Mickalene Thomas, among others.

Additionally, the AGO has been gifted a set of six preparatory works made by Judy Chicago for her work The Dinner Party (1974-1979). This includes four ceramic test plates and two drawings, honouring the contributions of Eleanor of Aquitaine, Sacajawea, Caroline Herschel and Elizabeth Blackwell.

“These artists are among the most exciting creators working today,” says Stephan Jost, the AGO’s Michael and Sonja Koerner Director, and CEO. “Toronto is a global leader in conversations around gender, representation, and art, and the acquisition of these works underscores our ongoing commitment to developing the AGO Collection in meaningful, relevant ways.”

Antigone, 2018 – Tacita Dean (b. 1965)
With a reputation for being among United Kingdom’s most celebrated artists working today, Tacita Dean is best known for her lyrical and subtle photographs and films made using analogue technology. Dean’s most ambitious film project to date, Antigone is a homage to two Antigone characters: Dean’s own sister and the hero of Sophocles’s Greek tragedy. Told through the medium of collage, their stories run side-by-side on two screens in 35mm. With a run time of one hour, the film features British actor Stephane Dillane and Canadian poet Anne Carson, speaking both in and out character, and concludes with a campfire conversation between Dillane, Carson and Dean, on the banks of the Mississippi River in a very different city named Thebes. Moving back and forth through the centuries, time is represented in the film by the progression of a social eclipse that looms over multiple geographies and seasons.

This is the second work by Dean to enter the AGO Collection. Darmstädtler Werkblock (2009) is a set of photogravures made by Dean of the Hessisches Landesmuseum in Darmstadt, site of the famous seven-room installation Block Beuys, 1970-86 by Joseph Beuys.

Antigone was purchased with funds from the AGO Modern and Contemporary Curatorial Committee, the David Yuile and Mary Elizabeth Hodgson Fund, the Elcy Wallace Fund, the Richard Ivey Foundation Contemporary Art Fund, the Janet and Michael Scott Fund, the Jay Smith and Laura Rapp Fund, and the Molly Gilmour Fund.

OPERA (QM.15), 2016 – Dominique Gonzalez-Foerster (b. 1965)

One of France’s most preeminent contemporary artists, Dominique Gonzalez-Foerster has spent her 30-year artistic career focusing on the relationship between past and present, using multiple mediums and figures to look at the connections between time, space and memory. Opera (QM.15) is one in a series of works staged by and starring the artist in disguise. Gonzalez-Foerster refers to these works as “apparitions”, and her goal she says is to create "viewer-traps", works that combine two or more moments in time in one 3D figure. Assuming here the appearance and voice of the famous opera singer Maria Callas, the artist appears cloaked in a red dress similar to the one worn by Callas during one of her final performances. Lip-syncing various arias from Callas’s early career, visitors encounter this 3D embodiment of the singer at the end of a dark corridor. A figure of public scrutiny, Callas was alternately praised and chastised for her body shape, and criticisms of the negative impact her weight loss on her voice were continuous throughout her career, a fact that Gonzalez-Foerster intentionally calls attention to here by contrasting the younger voice with Callas’s older, thinner, body.

Works by Gonzalez-Foerster have appeared in five editions of the Venice Biennale and are represented in the collections of several world-renowned museums, including The Museum of Modern Art (MET) in New York City, the Tate Modern in London, and M+ Museum in Hong Kong.

Despite Gonzales-Foerst’s extensive international exhibition history, the AGO will be the only museum in Canada to hold one of her works in its permanent collection.

OPERA (QM.15) was purchased with funds from the AGO Modern and Contemporary Curatorial Committee and the David Yuile and Mary Elizabeth Hodgson Fund (2018).

Monotones (Seascape), 2016 – Silke Otto-Knapp (b. 1970)

For more than 10 years, Silke Otto-Knapp has been experimenting with watercolour, bringing a unique sensibility and vision to the medium. Working mostly in shades of black, grey and silver, her images have a distinctive and intriguing combination of both flatness and luminosity, which comes from her unique process of layering and washing away paint on canvas and linen. Across four panels, in fluid shadowy greys, Monotones (Seascape) describes a section of Newfoundland’s rugged seacoast. Inspired by the choreography of Frederick Ashton, the works in Otto-Knapp’s Monotones series, approach painting as a kind of endless repetition, with landscapes and white-clad figures delineated in controlled, unbroken lines. This is Silke Otto-Knapp’s second work to enter the AGO collection. Seascape (trail) (2015) was acquired in 2016.

Monotones (Seascape) was purchased with assistance from an anonymous donor.
Hell Yeah We Fuck Die, 2016 – Hito Steyerl (b. 1966)
Hito Steyerl is an artist, theorist and acute observer of our contemporary world. Her work blends narration, computer generated images, documentary film footage and pop culture references, and presents us with a vision of the world that is at once entertaining and frightening. The title of this work comes from the five most used words in song titles from English-language music charts between 2010 and 2016. The architectural environment composed of metal walls, pipes and light box seating resembles a module for parkour a sport that originated in military training and involves moving as quickly as possible through a series of obstacles. The two videos embedded in the environment reveal very different moments in the development of robotics. This is the first artwork by Steyerl to join the AGO Collection and is featured in the ongoing solo exhibition This is the future.

Hell Yeah We Fuck Die was purchased with funds by exchange from Morey and Jennifer Chaplick and Women’s Art Initiative, 2020.

Silaup Putunga, 2018 – Laakkuluk Williamson Bathory (b. 1979) & Jamie Griffiths (b. 1965)
Commissioned in 2018 by the AGO and Mobilizing Inuit Cultural Heritage, York University, this double-sided video installation was inspired by the artists desire to create a ‘living print’, one that connected printmaking with the fundamental Inuit concepts nuna – the land, and sila – the life forces of the land (knowledge of the land, water, ice and environment). Featuring Williamson Bathory as she performs uajeerneq, a Greenlandic mask dance, the video slowly leads viewers through the Arctic landscape, as she chops ice, drives a Skidoo, aims a gun and walks. Using algorithms designed by Jamie Griffiths, the artworks striking images and sounds are projected in an ever changing sequence to produce an evolving narrative. The soundscape was performed by Williamson Bathory and Celina Kalluk.

Silaup Putunga was purchased with funds from the Joan Chalmers Inuit Art Fund, 2019.

Six preparatory works for The Dinner Party (1974-1979) – Judy Chicago (b. 1939)
Eleanor of Aquitaine Test Plate #6, 1975-1978
Sacajawea Test Plate, 1975-1978
Elizabeth Blackwell test plate, 1975-1978
Caroline Herschel test plate (late), 1975-1978
Eleanor of Aquitaine Gridded Runner Drawing, 1979
Study for Sacajawea Plate, 1977

A pioneering feminist American artist, Judy Chicago is internationally renowned for her iconic collaborative installation The Dinner Party (1974–1979). Incorporating needlework, porcelain, ceramics, and china painting, The Dinner Party features a triangular table, at which 39 place settings are set, each one dedicated to a different woman in history. More than 400 men and women, mostly volunteers, helped create The Dinner Party over a four-year period. The Dinner Party was exhibited at the AGO in 1982, bringing more than 50,000 visitors to the Gallery over six weeks. Celebrating that moment and the vital role The Dinner Party plays in feminist art history, the AGO has acquired six preparatory works made by Chicago for the original installation, including four ceramic test plates and two drawings, honouring the contributions of Eleanor of Aquitaine, Sacajawea, Caroline Herschel and Elizabeth Blackwell. When seen together, these works provide new insights into the evolution of Chicago’s most famous work. They will go on view at the AGO in early December, 2019.

The Six Preparatory works for The Dinner Party were a gift of ARTdivas Inc., a Calgary women’s collective, with support from patron Judy Chicago, 2018.

Tacita Dean

Dominique Gonzalez-Foerster

is a French artist, born in 1965 in Strasbourg. Her practice is restlessly cross-disciplinary, taking cues from film, literature, architecture, philosophy and critical theory. Through immersive installations that include film or are suggestive of filmic tropes, Gonzalez-Foerster uses the medium of experience as a way to question the essences of objects and the meaning of context. Trafficking in a unique type of psychological collage within works and between them, her varied oeuvre has taken myriad forms, including collected fragments of modernist buildings in Brazil, an autobiographical hanging of 40 years of her own wardrobe, and an immersive light and sound environment meant to evoke the chaos, dread, and wonderment of future lives. In her latest works, the Apparitions, Gonzalez-Foerster uses live performance and holographic projections that conflate characters from history, literature and film with their sociological sources and ramifications. Often relying on elliptical texts that place equal weight on fiction, fact, and the pluralism of memory, Gonzalez-Foerster creates heterogeneous worlds that thrive on the tension between finite and infinite, the empirical and the dramaturgical. Gonzalez-Foerster is the recipient of the 2002 Marcel Duchamp Award.

Silke Otto-Knapp

was born in 1970 in Osnabrück, Germany, and holds a degree in cultural studies from the University of Hildesheim and a master of arts from Chelsea College of Art and Design, London. Recent solo exhibitions of Otto-Knapp’s work include Monday or Tuesday, Camden Arts Centre, London (2014); Questions of Travel, Kunsthalle Vienna and Fogo Island Arts (2014); Cold Climate, Museum Marino Marini, Florence (2014); A light in the moon, UC Berkeley Art Museum and Pacific Film Archive (2011); Many many women, Kunstverein München, Munich (2010); as well as exhibitions at Walter Phillips Gallery, Banff (2009); and Tate Britain, London (2005).
