

Boston June 21 1854

Dear Bradburn,

Mrs Hoyt and Sarah are here now. The Doctor was here yesterday. Sarah and the Doctor had expected to go to Cleveland next week, and thence to Cincinatti, St. Louis, Chicago, Milwaukie, &c. But it is now hardly probable the Doctor will go. If he should not Sarah will go to Cleveland as soon as she can find company, and thence on her trip with a Mr Witt, of Cleveland, and some of his family, who are relatives of hers. At Cleveland she will be the guest of Mr Witt - who may be known to you. He is a railroad builder. She will be glad to see Mrs Bradburn and yourself; and I think both of you will be pleased to see her. She is not beautiful, but she is very sensible, very accomplished, very lovely in her disposition, and very simple and childlike in her manners. And if you or Mrs Bradburn wish fore any music, she can give you some of the best quality. I hope you will call upon her.

We have no news except such as you have seen in the papers. There has been a great movement in hunkerdon[?] in favor of liberty; caused by the Burns case and Nebraska. I think some of it will last.

Nochange in the "Commonwealth" except that Robinson of Lowell has been talking of going into the concern - whether he will, was not decided when I last heard.

I have been hoping to hear from you and to learn whether you have any prospects before you.

I am getting along well with my argument - which is perhaps the greatest good I can expect or ask for at this time.

I saw Mrs Hildreth today - she hopes to go to Cleveland in the course of the summer. They are now trying to find quarters in the city - do not like living in the country, and coming into the city to do their work.

Do write me. My love to Mrs. Bradburn.

Yours truly,

L Spooner

My lady and I do not get reconciled - have not written each other for near three months - somewhat doubtful whether we ever become friends again.

If you should see Dr. Hoyt or Sarah, you must not make any inquiries about my love affairs.
