

Observing our Caterpillars

The children have spent some more time observing and exploring our caterpillars and have had many interesting ideas about the evolution of the caterpillars. Through their observations, they were able to hypothesize what will happen next, how many legs they have, and the sounds they think they make.

"I think they're going to come into cocoons and then they're going to wake up as butterflies."

"I noticed they're green and they have lots of feet. They can make sounds. Like che che che che."

"This caterpillar will turn into these butterflies. They're going into the chrysalis then they hatch out with their little wings."

"I noticed they have spikes. Their legs are like all crescents. I think they have twenty legs!"
