The “Happiest Place on Earth” is also a hit with an organization of Southern California food writers.

Disneyland Resort restaurants won a dozen awards from the Southern California Restaurant Writers Inc. earlier this month. Eight restaurants – two in Disneyland, two in Disney California Adventure and three in the resort’s hotels – were chosen in four different categories.

Cathay Circle Restaurant, Napa Rose and Steakhouse 55 – all known for upscale dining experiences – won both the Golden Bacchus Wine Award and a rating of five stars.

Ariel’s Grotto, Blue Bayou Restaurant, Cafe Orleans and Storytellers Cafe won a rating of four stars.

Goofy’s Kitchen, which is in the Disneyland Hotel, was awarded three stars.

Jose Barragan, manager of the Cathay Circle Restaurant and a 17-year Walt Disney Parks and Resorts employee, won manager of the year.

Started in 1975, the Southern California Restaurant Writers evaluates restaurants annually from Santa Barbara to the Mexico border.

The event will include unlimited 4-ounce pours with entry, 30 Bootlegger beers on tap, guest breweries, live music, games, a cigar bar and access to the Muckenthaler Gallery exhibit showroom. The brewery will be unveiling a special sixth anniversary ale at the festival.

Gourmet food trucks will provide grub for hungry attendees. Dos Chinos, TJ's Woodfire Pizza, Porko Rico Truck and Brew Cakes Dessert are scheduled to attend.

Bootlegger's recommends guests arrive 30 minutes early to the event for check-in.

Family recipe gets a Kickstarter

Cindy Arlantico's hot chili oil has always been in high-demand among family and friends.

"You can use it on just about anything," Arlantico said. "We put it on macaroni and cheese and pizza and rice and tacos and burritos and salad dressing ... everything."

Nicknamed "motor oil" by her eldest son, the chili oil settles into two layers: a light-but-hot top layer and a thick, spicy "sludge" at the bottom. Brave eaters can stir up the settled spices for especially fiery results.

Arlantico and her husband, Reggie, dreamed of bringing the oil to store shelves for years, but other responsibilities took priority. After receiving praise and support from a Fullerton-based manufacturer, Heiden Foods, Arlantico decided to push the product to market under the name Red Hot Motor Oil.

Using Kickstarter – a crowd-funding service used by entrepreneurs and businesses to launch niche products – Arlantico began to market her chili oil. Even though the first campaign didn't meet its funding goal of $17,000, Arlantico is launching a second campaign with a goal of $7,000.

"The first one didn't work out, but I think it's because I didn't have time to do a bunch of marketing on it," Arlantico said. "This time it's got a lot of momentum going now."

Bourbon Street in Downtown Fullerton and Michelangelo's Pizza on Chapman Avenue have already asked to carry the sauce in their restaurants, Arlantico said. She is also pursuing relationships with Sprouts, Whole Foods and Trader Joe's.

If the 45-day Kickstarter campaign is successful, a commercial formula will be produced. Red Hot Motor Oil will then be sold on store shelves.

Rubio's to hold local job fairs

In order to fill 2,000 positions before the busy summer season, Rubio's Restaurants is holding 29 job fairs throughout California, Colorado and Arizona. Three will be held in north Orange County cities.
