Jonathan (Jono) Duffy is an Australian Born Comedian, Actor, Writer and Filmmaker. He currently resides in Normandy, France. For the past half-decade he has been one of the most sought after working comedians and hosts in Iceland.

His irreverent brand of stand up comedy has made him a favourite of audiences in Australia, Iceland and parts of Europe, selling out shows and winning Awards.

Although he primarily works as a comedian, Jono has extensive experience across a wide range of artistic disciplines.

He has directed, shot and edited multiple film projects and regularly contributes to several online media sites as a commentator and writer.

In 2016 Jono was the Creative Director for Iceland's entry to the Eurovision Song Contest in Stockholm, Sweden. The entry 'Hear them Calling' by Greta Salóme competed in the first semi final.

He is the co-creator and writer of 'Bruce the Angry Bear' - a weekly comic strip that appears online and in print, and is the first LGBT+ themed comic strip in Icelandic history.

Jono is also the co-host of two successful podcasts; 'Icetralia' and 'Not In Front Of My Salad,' both shows garner a monthly audience of over 20,000 subscribers.

In late 2020, Jono moved to France to support his fiancé's decision to further his studies. He is currently learning French and working on online projects until COVID allows regular comedy shows to resume.
