Mr. James Lecollier

Mr. James Lecollier of the Defense Logistics Agency Troop Support, is inducted into the R&DA Hall of Fame based upon his thirty-five years of service and significant accomplishments in support of American Warfighters serving their nation around the world. His accomplishments are evidenced every day whenever an American Warfighter, in training, or in "Harm's Way", consumes an Individual Operational Ration such as a Meal Ready to Eat.

In his most recent assignment as Chief of Individual Rations for the Defense Logistics Agency, Mr. Lecollier has worked tirelessly to ensure that the United States Armed Forces never runs out of food. As the key player in Individual Ration acquisitions, he has worked closely with the major industrial base assemblers and their hundreds of supply chain providers, as well as with R&DA, to meet every mission requirement supporting our Troops in the field. His efforts to coordinate with all the players in this tremendously challenging supply chain, are second to none!

Mr. Lecollier is a recipient of the R&DA Colonel Rohland Isker Award, and his distinguished career as a Department of Defense Civilian, qualify him to be recognized as a 2017 addition to the R&DA Hall of Fame. As a dedicated civilian serving our Forces around the world, Mr. Lecollier is a credit to the Defense Logistics Agency, and an inspiration to all who have served with him these many years.
