Food+City Announces 2017 Finalists
Nonprofit aiming to improve urban food distribution selects 18 finalists for a chance at $50,000 in prize money

November 04, 2016 - (AUSTIN, Texas)—After three months of fielding submissions from 18 different countries, Food+City has chosen 18 finalists to compete for a total of $50,000 in prize money to improve how we feed cities through innovative and cutting edge solutions.

The Food+City Challenge Prize is an annual contest hosted by the Austin-based non-profit that inspires action and change in food logistics. Applicants are asked to dream up new ways to provide more people access to safe, nutritious food. The Food+City Challenge Prize serves to connect entrepreneurs and early-stage startups to mentorship that can help expand and grow their business.

Finalists for the Food+City Challenge Prize are currently being paired with distinguished mentors to help them prepare for the Food+City Challenge Prize pitch competition in February 2017. Food+City Challenge Prize finalists will present their projects to a panel of judges, and are automatically in the running for a total of $50,000 in prize money and an incredible package of business startup services to use toward their proposed business. The finalists for this year's Food+City Challenge Prize come from an exciting and diverse range of backgrounds and nine different countries. The 2017 finalists are as follows:

- BucketLoad
