FIELD TRIP INFORMATION AND RESOURCES

GUIDELINES

To ensure an enjoyable trip for you and your students, please review the following rules:

- Upon arrival to Intuit, please have all students place backpacks and coats in our performance space.
- If your group is larger than 20 people, we may break them into separate groups in the performance space before entering the exhibitions (depending on exhibition).
- Please remind your students not to touch or lean against any of the art.
- If you are handing out an assignment, please let us know beforehand so we may provide clipboards and pencils. No pens in the gallery please.
- Please maintain a relatively quiet noise level within your group as staff offices are also onsite.
- No food, drink, and photography permitted in the galleries.

RECOMMENDED FILMS (FROM INTUIT'S ROBERT A. ROTH STUDY CENTER)

Driving the Dream - a film by Harrod Blank investigating the culture of art cars and the people who design them. A great film for middle school and below, because it introduces non-traditional art in an exciting and accessible manner.

In the Realms of the Unreal - a documentary about the life of Henry Darger. Film includes interviews with neighbors, excerpts from his novel and many examples of his drawings. 90 mins.

Tom Every: The Force Sculpture - a film about Every, creator of Forevertron. A former industrial wrecker, Every uses scrap metal to build incredible sculptures.

Come Unto Me: The Faces of Tyree Guyton - a documentary about Guyton and the Heidelberg Project, which transformed vacant lots on Heidelberg Street in Detroit into massive "lots of art".

I Build the Tower - a documentary about Simon Rodia, an Italian immigrant who built the Watts Towers of South Central Los Angeles. 87 mins.

Inside the Art of Self-Taught Artists - a look at three self-taught artists, Ken Grimes, Kevin Sampson and Malcah Zeldis. 28 mins.

James Castle: Portrait of an Artist - a film about Castle, a deaf, self-taught artist who grew up in Idaho. Castle's drawings were influenced by his immediate surroundings. 53 mins.

Lonnie Holley - an uplifting story about Holley, who began making art as a means to cope with personal tragedy. His art has a strong emphasis on the spiritual world and his ancestral heritage.

Rizzoli - a film about A.G. Rizzoli, a draftsman who made intricate pen and ink drawings filled with architectural structures and utopian ideas.

Visions of Paradise - a look at five self-taught artists who began to make art late in their life: Calvin Black, Harry Lieberman, Tressa Prisbrey, Minnie Evans and the Monument of Chief Rolling Mountain Thunder.

Midwest related Rare Visions - short films documented by three camera men who travel the United States visiting folk art sites. 30 mins./episode

Mr. Dial Has Something to Say - a documentary on self-taught artist, Thornton Dial, and his visual interpretation of life from America's former slave culture and critique on contemporary American politics and society. 57 mins.

The Living Museum – a documentary featuring a group of patient-artists at the art studio of the Creedmoor Psychiatric Center, the largest state psychiatric care institution in New York City. 78 mins.

Wesley Willis: The Daddy of Rock n' Roll – a documentary about Chicago-based rock musician and artist Wesley Willis, who was challenged by a weight disorder and paranoid schizophrenia.
