Basic Law

Frank Ching says the job of our chief executive is made impossible by the Hong Kong electoral system laid out in the Basic Law.

Jerome A. Cohen

The US-Asia Law Institute at NYU School of Law and publisher of this article.

Chatham House, London

The Centre of European Policy Studies, Brussels.

South China Morning Post

The paper claims to be the region's premier daily newspaper and has a reputation for independent journalism.

Wednesday, July 20, 2011

Neoliberalism and the Global South

Olivario Canuto assesses the risks of the middle-income trap for emerging economies.

---

Justice for peers

Jeremy A. Cohen says the legal systems on both sides of the Taiwan Strait could benefit from studying South Korea's experiments in citizen participation in criminal trials. This is an imaginative, if tentative, effort to make sure that South Korea does not become the thought leader of the world in this field.

Alvin Cheung says the position of the EU-Asia Law Institute at NYU School of Law and publisher of this article.

---

License to print this article?

Copyright: Project Syndicate

---

Euro zone must first step itself coming apart

Paola Subacchi says reforms can wait, but members' agreement on a survival plan can't

---

Beware the rise and stall of global growth engine

Olivario Canuto assesses the risks of the middle-income trap for emerging economies.