The American Association of Justice is in a quandary over the market collapse, and even within South Korea, debate has intensified. A number of critics have argued that the current system is outdated and needs reform.

Cheonan sCEPTics

John Cusack-Civilian Investigation Group, a South Korean organization that had previously denied that there was any evidence of North Korean involvement in the Cheonan sinking, has now revised its position and confirmed that there was an explosion under the ship. The group’s leader, Song Yong-nam, says that the sinking was caused by an external explosion, and that the sinking was the result of a failed North Korean missile test.

One of the key arguments against the US government’s claims is that there was no evidence of an external explosion. The group’s report states that there was no evidence of an external explosion, and that the sinking was caused by an internal explosion. The group’s report also states that there was no evidence of a missile being fired from North Korea.
