Dear Food Rescue Friend,

When I moved to Jackson seven years ago and began dumpster diving for food, I had no idea what was about to unfold in my life and within this community. Hole Food Rescue started as a small group of friends who would gather once a week to enjoy a meal prepared from the food we recovered from the dumpster and discuss the plight of the current food system. As we sat and broke bread, our food rescue community began to take shape over a shared desire to create a food system – and maybe, a world – that was more sensible. At the time, we had no money, few professional skills to speak of, yet we had a desire for something greater. As we now approach our sixth birthday and I reflect on the many phases of Hole Food Rescue, I can say one thing with certainty: how far we have come as a food rescue community and what we have built—from nothing—is extraordinary.

I am overwhelmed with gratitude for those who have joined me on this journey. The friendships made and good times had are nearly innumerable. If I tried to thank everyone who is responsible for what Hole Food Rescue is today, I would run quickly out of room in this report. So many people have literally and figuratively helped lift up this organization – moving and sorting thousands of pounds of food, supporting us financially, offering advice and professional resources – but there is one person whom, without her passion and commitment, this organization would simply not exist. Our former Co-Executive Director, Jeske Gräve, poured her heart, soul, and intelligence into Hole Food Rescue for five years. Jeske has since moved on to an exciting new career in Idaho, but we know her love for people, the planet, and food rescue lives on. This report is very much a reflection of her work - thank you for an awesome half-decade, Jeske.

The past two years have been a period of continuous growth and one in which Hole Food Rescue's place in the community has truly solidified. We are making a tangible difference and have no intention of stopping! We’ve rescued more than 1,000,000 pounds of food and have helped thousands of food insecure residents. Over 2017-2018, we expanded and remodeled our facility and we added Smith’s, Aspens Market and Pearl Street Market as year-round food donors, which increased our monthly food diversion by 5,000 pounds. We formed partnerships with 13 new food recipient locations and grew our volunteer team from 65 to 115 people. We developed a custom food rescue data collection app, purchased a new food delivery van – thank you Kemmerer family – piloted a nutrition and exercise program targeting Latino parents, and built the first in-school food pantry in Teton County. As a result of this work, we expanded our contact and impact within the community.

Although our group started as an ambiguous, grassroots gathering of friends, Hole Food Rescue is stronger and more mission-focused than ever. We envision a community in which no edible food is wasted, where all children have sufficient access to nutritious food for every meal, and where food access barriers for anyone in need are removed. We imagine new food distribution channels in places where they previously did not exist and a community where our food and our people are cared for and respected. We have a vision for our community, and we know that we can not realize it without you. Thank you for being a part of our journey thus far and we hope you will continue along into our next chapter.

With gratitude,

Ali Milburn
Founder & Executive Director

25% of students at Munger Mountain Elementary School are on free and reduced cost lunches.

Some of these children are at risk of going hungry over the weekend. Thus, in fall 2018, we set up the first of its kind in Teton County School District #1, an in-school food pantry. On Fridays, students can shop for free food to take home with them over the weekend.

Food production in the U.S. uses 10% of the total U.S. energy budget, 50% of U.S. land, and 80% of freshwater consumed in the U.S. Yet, 30-40% of the food produced in the U.S. goes uneaten.

Every year, Americans waste 67 million tons of food, equivalent to $160 billion. Food waste is the single largest component entering municipal landfills and generates methane, a greenhouse gas 21x more potent than CO2.

Wasting food wastes the land, water, energy, labor and love used in producing, processing, transporting, preparing, storing, and distributing food.

Feed people, not landfills.
What Type of Food Do We Rescue?

Our Impact on the Environment

43,461,981 gallons of water it takes to produce 270,414 pounds of food. Good thing we didn’t let all that water go to waste either.

*Source: Water Footprint Network

As food waste decomposes in landfills, it releases methane gases into the atmosphere. In carbon equivalents, we prevented 95,997 kg CO2 emissions in 2018.

Volunteers

Hole Food Rescue was founded on volunteerism, and six years later, our volunteers are still the backbone of our organization. We could not do what we do without their time, energy and commitment. Each year, Hole Food Rescue volunteers donate over 4,000 hours fighting food waste and hunger in our community.

We are always looking to grow our volunteer team. Learn more and apply today at holefoodrescue.org/volunteer

Within two years of moving into our facility, it became apparent that we had outgrown our 750 sq. ft. food “Hub.” We searched for a bigger rental space to no avail, so with the help of many people, we opted to maximize what we had.

We reconfigured and enhanced the efficiency of our space: installed a 100 sq. ft. walk-in refrigerator outside of the building; turned a window into a new entrance; installed 150 sq. ft. of dry storage and a new food prep station with an industrial sink.

As a result, our remodel allowed us to stay in our facility and manage a 25% growth in the amount of food we rescue and redistribute.

The revamped Hub is more spacious and organized, with improved facilities for intake, sorting and storage.

The Hole Food Rescue Hub is dedicated to the many people that made it’s remodel possible.
