Critical Conversations: Teaching Communication at Jesuit Institutions during Turbulent Times

This year’s conference will emphasize deep conversations about how Jesuit values inform communication faculty’s understanding and practice of teaching, research and service during a time of national and international turmoil. As a discipline, communication can uniquely engage uncertainty and change within and across personal, cultural, and technological boundaries. The Jesuit mission additionally calls communication faculty to interrogate social injustices, creating dialogic tensions that demand exploration. To that end, ACJU-CC 2020 invites submissions that will foster discussion about any critical intersections—those that are crucial to discuss or those that should be criticized—between the communication discipline, its pedagogy, research, or institutions, and current national or international cultural conflicts and injustices.

Any conference presentation format is welcome. Unconventional presentation formats are encouraged. Submissions should include a title, abstract, description of presentation format, and at least one practical takeaway for attendees. Submissions are due no later than May 31, 2020. Authors will be notified about their submission’s acceptance by June 15, 2020. Preference will be given to submissions that address the conference theme.
